UPDATE ON ACHIEVEMENTS

Operational Context

The recent national situation was characterised by political tensions and social unrest, after the Presidential Security Regiment called for the resignation of the Prime Minister. A mediation process is currently ongoing, involving the main stakeholders. It is led by a former Burkina Faso's President Jean-Baptiste Ouédraogo and the current one, Michel Kafando. The latter released a statement calling for calm and claiming he is committed to free and transparent elections, refuting claims that his government wants to prolong the current transition.

With regard to the Mali situation, as the concessions from the government called by the CMA have been granted, the latter signed the peace agreement that will give partial autonomy to the north of the country. New security plans as well as a development programme for the Azawad region will now be agreed. On Thursday 18, the government dropped arrest warrants against rebel leaders. During the period of June 2015 74 new refugees' arrivals were registered by UNHCR and the government of Burkina Faso. The families mainly arrive from the regions of Gao and Timbuktu.

The main extended-reach drilling hole providing water to the Sahel region of Burkina Faso stopped functioning from end of April to end of May due to technical problems. Reportedly, this caused the death of one shepherd and more than 2,000 cattle, increasing the vulnerability of their owners and their families, including UNHCR's people of concern. The hole has now been repaired and actions are being taken by the government and UN agencies to increase and diversify water supply sources in the region.

An informal mining site close to Goudoubo camp (Dori) is entailing an increase in water consumption in the area as well as a possible contamination of the drainage water. Mining workers also use the health centre of the camp, which increases the workload of its staff. UNHCR is exploring ways to collaborate with the government and other UN agencies in order to mitigate the negative drawbacks that the site may have on both host communities and refugees.

Achievements

Contributing to a favorable protection environment by ensuring fair protection processes and documentation, targeting assistance to people with specific needs, and promoting peaceful coexistence between refugees and local communities.
