- India -

In the year 2013, India passed the Criminal Law (Amendment) Ordinance introducing the section 370A defining Trafficking in Persons according to the UN Trafficking in Persons Protocol definition. The Immoral Traffic Prevention Act (ITPA) was used before, and it is still widely used to prosecute some forms of trafficking for sexual exploitation. Other articles of the criminal code are also used to prosecute trafficking for sexual exploitation, including 'buying girls for prostitution', 'selling of girls for prostitution', 'importation of girls' and 'procurement of minor girls'. Trafficking for forced labour is prosecuted under other offences, including the Child Labour Prohibition Act and the laws prohibiting bonded labour.

– Maldives –

In December 2013, the national authorities introduced the offence of trafficking in persons in Maldives. The anti-trafficking bill criminalizes sexual exploitation and forced labour. Before that, Maldives did not have anti-trafficking legislation in place. Article 25 (a) of the Constitution prohibits slavery, servitude and forced labour. Article 3(a) of the Employment Act (2008) prohibits forced labour.

Investigations and suspects

The Human Rights Commission of Maldives reports that since the introduction of the new legislation, a limited number of cases of trafficking have been investigated and are pending with the prosecutor's office. No convictions have been recorded under the new legislation.

The Human Rights Commission of Maldives reported that many migrant workers are faced with a number of limitations in their movement, which make them vulnerable to exploitation and human trafficking. The commission also flags the presence of young girls and adult women domestically trafficked for sexual exploitation and domestic servitude.

According to the national authorities, trafficking in persons is widespread across the country. Crime groups use Maldives as a transit point for illegal entry to Europe. According to the department of immigration, a significant amount of foreign nationals have been interdicted on their way to Europe, Canada, and Australia by using counterfeit passports. These individuals are from East Asia, South Asia, the Middle East, and Sub-Saharan Africa. The authorities also report that expatriate workers are often victims of trafficking who have paid exorbitant amounts to rogue agents in the range of US$2,000 to travel to Maldives, have had their documents confiscated, and are made to live and work in inhumane conditions.
