Updates - Education Sector –

- On February 3rd, the first of a series of consultative meetings with NGOs was organized by MEHE and the Centre for Education Research and Development (CERD) on Early Childhood Education (ECE). The meeting aimed to collect the partners' feedback towards the development of a unified Non-Formal Early Childhood Education (ECE) package. Around 30 organizations participated in the ECE consultation including local international and UN agencies. They were requested to present their current and planned programmes in 2016 targeting 3-5 year olds, share materials and brainstorm on the key priorities of ECE competency framework.
- The INEE Secretariat hosted a consultation in Beirut with the Education sector, facilitated by Dean Brooks, to identify and record the Education partners' ideas about the scope, functions, and proposed options for a "Common Platform" for Emergency in Education and protracted crises. The 'Common Platform' aims to generate political and operational commitment, and financial resources for meeting the educational needs of millions of children and young people affected by crisis.

Updates - Education Sector –

- In the London Conference Lebanon asked the international donors for $12bn over the next five years to cope with the Syrian refugee crisis. It carried a briefing note prepared by LHIF (Lebanon Humanitarian International Forum) to bring more aid than what was promised in previous conferences. $11 billion was pledged to address the Syrian humanitarian needs over the next four years (5.8 billion for 2016). Lebanon's education leadership was highlighted at the Conference with HE Minister Bou Saab speaking at the Education plenary for pledging, the great progress in Education made over the last two years and the quality of the RACE Ex Com partnership that aim to get all children into education by end of the 2016/17 school year. The following Education commitments were highlighted: education for all, ensuring access to early childhood education, expanding education access for the most vulnerable out of school children through Non-Formal Education, increasing vocational education for youth, and improving the quality of national educational systems and monitoring capacity. A follow-up note was sent on the 13th by LHIF members – together with local NGOs – offering assistance in the planning and operationalization of the statement.

Discussion on two Consultancy Visits in Lebanon -

▪ Study on CPMS awareness and use – Global CPMS TF –

The external consultancy aims to conduct a review of the implementation efforts, outcomes and impacts of the CPMS and provide lessons learned from December 2012 to end 2015. The review will look primarily at the first two objectives of the Implementation Plan:

- a. Awareness and acceptance of the CPMS in the child protection sector and humanitarian community and
- b. Use and integration of the CPMS in humanitarian programming (including preparedness). How are the CPMS being used by different child protection humanitarian actors (UN, INGO, NGOs, CBOs, Government, etc.); What is the impact of the CPMS on coordination at national and subnational level? How have the CPMS been used to improve the quality of the child protection response in different contexts? Has there been an impact on better outcomes for children? What specific measures have agencies taken to mainstream the CPMS in other sectors at field level? What else is needed to support practical implementation of the CPMS in humanitarian action?

Discussion on two Consultancy Visits in Lebanon -

▪ Study on Justice for Children – IBCR, Montreal

Project: Study on emergency preparedness and response on justice for children using Lebanon as an example

The study, undertaken from a sector perspective, would look at the state of emergency preparedness and response in Lebanon since the beginning of the Syrian crisis. The objective is to see if and how justice for children issues have been taken into account. It will also examine how the overlap or the divide (that is often particularly apparent relating to justice for children) has been approached/ bridged between the emergency and development sectors. The study would identify lessons learned and document good practices over the last couple of years. In doing so, the study can be a tool to guide the way forward and accompany the contextualization of Standard 14 in Lebanon and other countries.
