POPULATION MOVEMENTS

Continuous flow of internally displaced persons (IDPs) from west Mosul to Hammam Al-Alil. The government has opened a new camp south of Mosul, Jad'ah 5 camp, where 2,283 families (about 13,000 individuals) have been transferred between 30 March and 1 April. IDPs are fleeing areas recently retaken by the Iraqi Security Forces (ISF), and areas of west Mosul still under armed groups' control. Although the government and some NGOs are distributing food in a small number of retaken neighbourhoods in west Mosul, lack of food and potable water reportedly remains a considerable challenge for civilians in west Mosul. Some reported that they hadn't had access to potable water for up to 45 days. IDPs from areas still under armed groups' control interviewed by UNHCR highlighted the enormous risks taken during their flight, including targeting by snipers and IEDs.

About 5,000 IDPs from west Mosul arrived to camps in the northeast of Mosul last week. Between 24 and 30 March, 826 families displaced from west Mosul were transferred from Hammam Al-Alil to Nargizlia 2 camp, some 35 km northeast of Mosul. This represented a 50 per cent increase in transfers from Hammam Al-Alil to camps northeast of Mosul, compared to the previous week.

SITUATION UPDATE

UN chief urges greater solidarity with Mosul displaced. During a visit to Hasansham U3 camp on 31 March, just 30 km east of Mosul, United Nations Secretary-General António Guterres called on the international community to step up its response and do more to help the hundreds of thousands of people from Mosul who have been uprooted from their homes in the on-going battle for control of Iraq's second-largest city. "There is a huge effort by the regional government [of Kurdistan], a huge effort by the NGOs, a huge effort by UN agencies but we don't have the necessary resources to support these people," he added.

UNHCR is currently appealing for USD 212 million in 2017 to continue providing urgent assistance to Iraqis displaced from Mosul – including USD 37 million urgently needed.

ISF is reportedly closing in on Al Nuri Great Mosque in the Old city of Mosul. According to the Federal Police, Iraqi forces are only 300 meters away from the mosque, a location of symbolic importance to the opposition armed groups occupying the city. Iraqi forces are reportedly planning a slow and careful advance in order to avoid destruction in this densely populated part of the city, characterized by a warren of narrow alleyways and ancient houses which pose considerable challenges for military operations. About 300,000 people are estimated to still be living in the Old City.

RESPONSE UPDATE

UNHCR continues to deliver essential assistance and protection services to people affected by the conflict in and around Mosul. Since the beginning of the military operations in October 2016, over 365,000 persons have been reached by UNHCR and its partners.

About 97,000 IDPs, 40 per cent of the population currently displaced by the military operations, are sheltered in camps built or supported by UNHCR. New arrivals to camps receive a hot meal, a tent, essential household items, and psychological first aid for those who need support. Three new camps are currently under construction for 100,000 IDPs: Hasansham U2, some 35 km east of Mosul, and Hammam Al-Alil 2 and As-Salamiyah 2 camps, 25 km south of Mosul.

In close collaboration with local authorities, who register new arrivals to east Mosul, UNHCR's partner continues to assist newly displaced families who recently settled in east Mosul. About 26,000 IDPs¹ from west Mosul have settled in east Mosul, either with relatives, in empty houses, or unfinished buildings. About 976 families (6,000 persons) were provided with essential household items between 22 and 30 March. Over 131,000 persons in need have received assistance in newly accessible areas since the beginning of the military operation in October 2016.
