Introduction

In May 2015, the Constitutional Court of Burundi approved President Pierre Nkurunziza's bid for a third term, triggering weeks of protests mainly in the capital, Bujumbura. Ahead of the elections, a spiral of violence forced thousands of fearful Burundians to flee their homes. Following President Nkurunziza's electoral victory in July 2015, the situation further deteriorated with the escalation of clashes between protestors and supporters of the ruling party, as well as with police forces. Efforts to broker dialogue between the various parties have been ineffectual and reports of human rights violations have increased; humanitarian actors have reported the deaths of more than 400 people, including aid workers, since April 2015.

An interagency regional Refugee Response Plan (RRP) and a UNHCR supplementary appeal were launched in 2015 as planning, coordination and fundraising platforms for the emergency response to the massive influx of new Burundian asylum-seekers.

Tensions remain high in the capital, Bujumbura, as well as in the provinces of Bururi, Makamba and Rumonge. Consequently, Burundians continue to seek asylum in neighbouring countries. By 1 June 2016, the crisis in Burundi had forced over 267,000 people to flee to the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), Rwanda, Uganda, the United Republic of Tanzania, and Zambia. In light of the prevailing situation inside Burundi, it is projected that another 76,000 people will likely seek asylum by the end of 2016, bringing the total to 343,000 refugees since April 2015. In parallel, the Government of Burundi reported that 36,000 Burundians returned from Tanzania last May, of whom 2,500 have been verified as refugees registered by UNHCR in Tanzania. It is expected that 50,000 will return spontaneously by the end of 2016, although conditions are not conducive to their return, and will also require assistance to reintegrate. Finally, some 41,000 internally displaced persons (IDPs) have so far been identified in IOM's Displacement Tracking Matrix (DTM), covering five provinces of the country.

This revised supplementary appeal for the Burundi situation (January-December 2016) presents UNHCR's additional requirements to respond to the needs of Burundian refugees, returnees and IDPs in 2016, and amount to a total of USD 180 million as detailed in the financial summary table below.

Overall strategy and coordination

In 2015, the worsening situation in Burundi led UNHCR to declare a level 1 emergency on 22 April, which was escalated to level 2 on 11 May. A Regional Refugee Coordinator (RRC) was appointed in the same month to coordinate the response. The RRC established and maintained strategic, policy, planning, operational and funding consultations and information-sharing with partners and stakeholders in the region. These discussions contributed to the production of the regional Refugee Response Plan (RRP).

While the infrastructure provided by the governments in the countries of asylum has been vital to ensuring an effective and immediate response to the emergency, humanitarian actors have had to react quickly and step up the provision of protection and services. UNHCR continues to coordinate the refugee response in cooperation with government ministries and departments of the respective countries, UN agencies, NGOs and affected populations.

Interagency meetings continue to be held on a regular basis at the national and regional levels to review the planning assumptions and framework, reassess the needs and requirements and address the implementation challenges.

PLANNED RESPONSE

Burundi

Existing response

The overall situation in Burundi has regained relative calm but remains tense and unpredictable. In various areas of the country, the 2015 election process has left ongoing political and civil instability in its wake. The Burundian Government has requested that UNHCR assist with spontaneous returns. Conditions for safe and dignified return to Burundi are not yet met, but UNHCR is responsible for assisting those returning and in need of urgent assistance. The imperative of foreseeing durable solutions at the onset of the crisis underlies UNHCR's obligation to prepare for spontaneous returns that could reach 50,000 individuals in 2016. The organization also seeks to assist some 41,000 internally displaced persons (IDPs) so far identified in IOM's Displacement Tracking Matrix (DTM), covering five provinces.

In order to assess the scale of returns and for purposes of deregistration, lists of returnee names are being shared with the countries of asylum. The capacity of the authorities is being strengthened on a regular basis with workshops and trainings. UNHCR has broadened its collaboration with the Burundian Red Cross and CARITAS to ensure that protection and border monitoring is carried out systematically in six targeted provinces, and that findings feed into development actors' programmatic design and planning. In so doing, UNHCR and its partners hope to gain as much information as possible on the profile of spontaneous returnees, as well as their needs and the challenges they face. To reinforce response efforts in this regard, UNHCR has taken steps to ensure that it is alerted by protection networks (including partners working in the communities) about priority geographical areas requiring protection and border monitoring as well as follow-up activities. The protection networks include mobile teams of Community Humanitarian Monitors (CHMs), working through partners and focal points. Their presence constitutes a form of protection for returnees, local communities and IDPs. UNHCR will provide training on protection monitoring to the CHMs and follow up on their activities.

In terms of the IDP response, the CHMs' focus will be on communities with a high concentration of IDPs to identify cases and situations which require a response from UNHCR and its partners. This response will be implemented in such a way as to protect persons displaced by the crisis from retaliation arising out of perceptions of special treatment. Similarly, in urban areas, IDPs will receive protection and services. They will be provided with assistance in centres originally constructed for vulnerable persons, which can be expanded to serve all the displaced (those displaced by violence and natural disasters, as well as returnees and host families).

Strategy and coordination

Two main institutions coordinate the humanitarian response in Burundi. Within the UN system, the Humanitarian Coordinator has activated the Humanitarian Country Team as well as various sectors. Sector working groups meet on a weekly basis. At the country level, the National Platform for Disasters Prevention and Crisis Management meets with all development, humanitarian and state departments involved in the response and prevention of natural and man-made disasters or crises. The former Inter-Agency Electoral Contingency Plan has been revised and now aims to address issues and challenges faced by host communities as well as returnees in the aftermath of the post-electoral tension and violence.

In close partnership with the Government of Burundi, UN agencies, as well as local and international NGOs, UNHCR coordinates activities aimed at facilitating returns to Burundi. These consist of providing life-saving assistance, promoting peaceful coexistence between returning refugees and receiving communities, and carrying out protection monitoring and advocacy. UNHCR's strategic response consists of three main objectives, the first of which is to provide returnees with the logistical support required to reach their final destination. The second is to provide returnees with life-saving assistance. In this regard, monitoring their protection situation and ensuring that they are treated on the same footing as their fellow citizens is crucial, particularly for persons with specific needs (PWSN). The final objective lies in achieving sustainable reintegration through the reinforcement of local services and the promotion of livelihoods.

Protection-oriented, social, and medical assistance is integrated into the IDP response. UNHCR participates in monitoring activities with a view to assisting IDPs with specific needs. This includes inter alia facilitating their access to basic services such as education and healthcare. Referral pathways and other mechanisms are being established to prevent and assist cases of SGBV in a comprehensive manner, from the identification phase to the final response by the appropriate actor(s). Awareness-raising sessions are being conducted for security forces and local authorities to mitigate the potential protection risks associated with the involvement of military personnel. Targeted groups with specific needs such as unaccompanied minors and separated children, the elderly and women at risk, benefit from life-saving assistance and shelter improvement/maintenance on an individual basis.

Financial requirements (USD)

UNHCR's 2016 original budget for the Burundi operation amounts to USD 19.4 million. To address the evolving needs of Burundian IDPs and refugees returning to Burundi from the DRC, Rwanda, Tanzania, Uganda and Zambia, and in view of the fact that these needs were not included in the original budget, UNHCR has established a supplementary budget for 2016 for the highlighted requirements. The total requirements for the Burundi situation in 2016, including the supplementary budget, amount to approximately USD 16.6 million.

DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF THE CONGO (DRC)

Existing response

UNHCR is working with the Commission Nationale pour les Réfugiés (CNR), NGO and UN agency partners as well as with other governmental counterparts to ensure the protection and assistance of new arrivals from Burundi. Protection monitoring has been reinforced allowing for the deployment of monitors along the border with Burundi, in the refugee-hosting areas and at 18 entry points, to ensure pre-registration of new Burundian asylum-seekers. Biometric registration is ongoing; 98 percent of identified refugees have been registered and provided with refugee cards.

To better manage the new group of Burundian refugees and for reasons of national security, the Lusenda camp was established on 1 June 2015. A year later, it hosted 17,210 refugees and currently has the capacity to accommodate 20,000 in total, subject to infrastructural improvements in the areas of shelter and WASH. Should this capacity be overstretched, provisions have been made to expand Lusenda camp and/or establish a new site. Approximately 70 percent of the new arrivals live in the camp, and the remaining 30 percent have opted to live with the host communities. Lusenda is located approximately 60 Km south of Uvira, a small town in the South Kivu province situated on the most northern point of Lake Tanganyika. In 2016 UNHCR opened an office in Mboko and maintained a small presence in Uvira, for administrative and logistical reasons. Mboko is situated 13 Km north of the Lusenda camp and poses less logistical constraints. In relocating most of its staff to Mboko, UNHCR has been able to better manage the Lusenda refugee camp and coordinate the overall response.

Through registration, refugees are able to enjoy their rights and gain access to basic essential services. In the Lusenda camp, they are provided with core relief items upon arrival and shelter for their households, and they receive food on a monthly basis. However, this does not guarantee safety from abuse such as sexual and gender-based violence (SGBV) or protect against the risk of forced recruitment. Since the opening of Lusenda camp, child-friendly spaces have been established; existing structures, response and referral mechanisms have been reinforced, and a community-based protection strategy put into place. Awareness-raising activities on personal hygiene, and prevention as well as response to SGBV and HIV/AIDS, are organised in the Kavimvira transit centre, Sange assembly point and in the Lusenda camp. Persons with specific needs such as unaccompanied children are assisted, and since the beginning of 2015, 568 unaccompanied or separated children have been identified in the camp. A community network for child protection or Réseau Communautaire de Protection de l'Enfance (RE-COPE) has been established and awareness-raising on child protection is carried out. In addition, ICRC has been carrying out family tracing for unaccompanied children. In order to prevent statelessness, UNHCR collaborates with the CNR to provide all newborn children with birth certificates.

Strategy and coordination

In accordance with the 2016 South Kivu contingency plan relative to the Burundian refugee influx, UNHCR continues to carry out the biometric registration of all refugees and facilitates their relocation to the Lusenda camp. Protection monitoring continues in collaboration with the CNR and the Direction Générale de Migration (DGM) in host villages and at the border. An agreement has been signed with the CNR to assist the Government in its efforts to strengthen its monitoring capacity at each entry point. UNHCR supports and assists national, provincial and local structures to improve refugees' access to protection, SGBV, shelter, health, HIV/AIDS, WASH and food security facilities. The agency also continues to advocate that self-reliance initiatives be reinforced in the host communities and in the sites to prevent tension with the host community and encourage sustained and peaceful coexistence. In parallel, UNHCR and the respective ministries have included refugees in the existing national education and health systems.

UNHCR works to reduce the risk of SGBV, particularly for persons with specific needs, by promoting safe access to fuel and energy initiatives. Regarding shelter, emergency dwellings are being gradually replaced by semi-durable structures (made of corrugated iron sheets for roofing and sun-baked bricks for walls). These measures mitigate the protection risks faced by those with specific needs, such as female-headed households, who live in emergency shelters.

Maintaining the civilian character of asylum remains key to ensuring refugees are able to fully enjoy their rights. UNHCR continues to support the Government in this endeavour. In particular, armed elements continue to be separated from civilians with the support of MONUSCO. Efforts are made to ensure the engagement of youth in constructive activities to reduce the risk of abuse and forced recruitment. The refugee protection working group has been reinforced to address wide-ranging protection concerns and pays added attention to children's specific needs and family monitoring to ensure that alternative care arrangements are established. Protection interventions are implemented through existing community-based structures.

Financial requirements (USD)

UNHCR's 2016 original budget for the DRC operation amounts to USD 191 million.

To address the evolving needs of refugees from Burundi who have sought asylum in the DRC, and in view of the fact that these needs were not included in the original budget for 2016, UNHCR established a supplementary budget for the highlighted requirements. The total requirements for the Burundi situation in the DRC in 2016, including the supplementary budget, amount to USD 8.6 million.

RWANDA

Existing response

At the end of March 2015, Rwanda witnessed a sudden mass influx of refugees following elections-related violence in neighbouring Burundi. The Government's open border policy enabled refugees fleeing Burundi to gain unfettered access to asylum, on a prima facie basis. Under the leadership and coordination of the Government of Rwanda's Ministry for Disaster Management and Refugee Affairs (MIDIMAR) and UNHCR, an interagency multi-sectoral response supported by UN agencies as well as national and international NGOs was initiated at the outset of the crisis. The Refugee Coordination Model (RCM) which was co-led by UNHCR and MIDIMAR was rolled out and continues to be implemented.

Newly-arriving Burundi refugees are transported from entry points at the border to three reception centres located in the southern Bugesera, Nyanza and Kirehe Districts and onward to a transit centre in the south-west Ruzizi District. All refugees from Burundi who are received at the border undergo initial registration. UNHCR then conducts biometric registration for refugees who are relocated to the Mahama camp and to urban settings of Kigali and Huye. In parallel, MIDIMAR also conducts registration upon arrival, in consultation with UNHCR. Humanitarian actors have constructed additional communal structures and rehabilitated existing ones at the reception sites and in the Mahama camp. As of 01 June, Mahama hosted 49,000 refugees. The camp can be expanded to a maximum capacity of 60,000. Multisectoral protection and assistance services are provided in all locations, and the inclusion of the refugees in the local public system (e.g. education, health) is promoted by the Government, whenever possible.

Strategy and coordination

UNHCR aims to ensure a coordinated response to the emergency through the systematic implementation of the Refugee Coordination Model (RCM). Activities are carried out in a timely manner, and accountability mechanisms are in place to ensure that all actors involved play their part in the process. Government, UN and NGO entities in Rwanda work to achieve results and avoid duplication. Biweekly coordination meetings are held with various Government ministries, UN agencies and NGO partners to identify and bridge gaps, discuss challenges, and agree on priorities and interventions that require urgent attention. UNHCR leads or co-leads the sector level refugee response with various UN agencies where appropriate.

UNHCR's strategy is driven by three main priorities, the first of which is to ensure access to territory. The second is to ensure that standards for safe and dignified accommodation are met through the maintenance of basic infrastructure in the reception centres and the camp. Finally, the third priority is to ensure that protection needs are met through the provision of life-saving multisectoral assistance to refugees in and out of the camp. In this regard, the inclusion of refugees in the national health and education system is being pursued.

Financial requirements (USD)

UNHCR's 2016 original budget for the Rwanda operation amounts to USD 41.9 million.

To address the evolving needs of refugees from Burundi who have sought asylum in Rwanda, and in view of the fact that these needs were not included in the original budget for 2016, UNHCR has established a supplementary budget for the highlighted requirements. The total requirements for the Burundi situation in Rwanda in 2016, including the supplementary budget, amount to USD 64.2 million.

UNITED REPUBLIC OF TANZANIA

Existing response

The crisis in Burundi has continued to force people to flee from Burundi across the border into Tanzania, although the arrival rate has dropped from an average high of 500 persons per day in early October 2015 to approximately 80 persons per day during the month of May 2016. As of 1 June, a total of 139,630 refugees and asylum-seekers from Burundi had been registered. A continued influx into Tanzania is expected to result in the arrival of an additional 30,000 Burundian refugees this year, bringing the total number of new Burundian refugees to 170,000 by December. To accommodate the new arrivals and to decongest Nyarugusu camp, the Government allocated three new camp sites, namely Nduta, Mtendeli and Karago. Relocations of new arrivals from border points and from Nyarugusu camp to Nduta ended in April and, as of 01 June, the camp hosted 55,000 refugees. Relocations of new arrivals from border points and from Nyarugusu to Mtendeli camp are ongoing and as of 1 June, Mtendeli camp hosted close to 19,000 refugees; the camp's maximum capacity stands at approximately 51,000 persons. UNHCR is engaged in discussions with the Government to obtain land for a new site as the amount of water available to supply Karago is insufficient.

These measures aim to improve the physical security of refugees and address the other protection concerns they face such as gender-based violence, sexual exploitation and abuse. In response, the office is implementing a comprehensive solutions strategy which includes the distribution of solar lanterns to all families, the provision of fuel efficient stoves as well as training and awareness-raising campaigns aimed at refugees, authorities and other service providers in the camp. Furthermore, core relief item (CRI) distributions prioritize persons with specific needs.

Strategy and coordination

The Government of Tanzania and the UN Country Team (UNCT) have compiled a contingency plan for mass population influx. This appeal is based on the existing contingency plan to maximise the synergies among UN agencies and NGO partners in the response, based on functional interagency and intergovernmental coordination mechanisms already in place, such as the coordination structure provided through the Delivering as One initiative.

In addition, UNHCR leads the interagency response for the Burundian refugee influx into Tanzania, in close coordination with the Office of the UN Resident Coordinator. Similarly, partners in the response closely collaborate and coordinate with the Government of Tanzania through its Refugee Service Department and the Border Management and Control Unit of the Immigration Department in the Ministry of Home Affairs. UN field offices collaborate and coordinate with the Regional Commissioner's Office. The Refugee Programme Working Group manages coordination and information sharing, and incorporates members from the Emergency Coordination Group (ECG).

Interagency meetings on appropriate sectorial interventions are held regularly in the field and in the capital. Emergency response centres have been established at UNHCR offices in Dar es Salaam, Kigoma, Kasulu and Kibondo, and make use of coordination fora to disseminate information on new arrivals, demographics, gaps and progress made. Weekly briefing notes for circulation to main actors, other UN agencies and donors have been developed. An Interagency Refugee Information Management Working Group for the purposes of coordinating information management products and sharing interagency information has been established to coordinate the refugee response with partners and UNHCR sectors. UNHCR and partners ensure that mass information campaigns are carried out with the newly arriving population within the reception facilities. They work with central and regional government departments to establish a community outreach information campaigns, and thus ensure that key messages are disseminated and understood by the refugee community.

Financial requirements (USD)

UNHCR's 2016 original budget for UNHCR's operations in Tanzania amounts to USD 40 million. To address the evolving needs of refugees from Burundi who have sought asylum in Tanzania and in view of the fact that these needs were not included in the original budget for 2016, UNHCR established a supplementary budget for the highlighted requirements. The total requirements for the Burundi situation in 2016, including the supplementary budget, amount to USD 74.8 million.

UGANDA

Existing response

The crisis in Burundi has continued to force people to flee from Burundi and onwards to Uganda. As of 01 June, 24,565 refugees were settled in the Nakivale and Oruchinga settlements. Given the sustained influx into Uganda, planning figures have been revised upwards by 10,000. In light of this, it is projected that an additional 15,000 refugees will seek asylum in Uganda, bringing the total number of new refugees to 40,000 by the end of the year. Newly-arriving refugees are registered by the Government's refugee information management system, which constitutes a major shift towards strengthened Government capacity in managing protection and assistance.

New arrivals are provided with food, core relief items and basic services before they are allocated plots of land within a settlement, where they receive household items, shelter kits and farming implements. Since the start of the current influx, various partners have contributed to implementing the protection response through family tracing services; alternative care arrangements for unaccompanied children; increasing the capacity of primary schools; and improving the ability of community structures to provide protection, prevention and response activities. Local government bodies have been involved in the design of community-based protection structures and trainings, thus ensuring that the arrangements within the settlements mirror those in the host communities.

The response to the influx includes both life-saving emergency operations as well as efforts to stabilise the situation of the existing refugee population. In this environment, UNHCR continues to provide access to asylum and life-saving emergency support at borders and reception centres. Furthermore, protection and SGBV referral systems have been strengthened. In the health and education sectors, integrated service delivery with District Local Government systems has been established to avoid duplication. On a wider scale, the integration of refugee management and protection into the National Development Plan has taken place. This is exemplified in the area of livelihoods, where support is provided from the onset in the form of gradual economic assistance for refugees staying in the country for extended periods of time.

Strategy and coordination

Together with the Office of the Prime Minister (OPM), UNHCR supports planning, implementation and coordination of the overall response for the refugee emergencies in Uganda, in consultation with UN and NGO partners. The integration of national and external capacities is particularly important in view of the non-camp settlement policy in Uganda. In Kampala, the interagency coordination meeting takes place on a monthly basis, and is co-chaired by the OPM and UNHCR, in addition to regular sector coordination meetings. At the regional level and at the settlement level, interagency coordination meetings and sectoral meetings take place on a regular basis. At field level, District Local Governments are at the forefront of the emergency response, working closely with UN and NGO partners and supplementing Government efforts. The Burundi refugee response in Uganda involves some 22 partners, including 16 NGOs, 6 UN agencies and international organisations.

UNHCR is further developing its delivery capacity, with particular focus on the health and education sectors. Programmatic planning is informed by gender-sensitive criteria to address inequalities and ensure all beneficiaries have equal access to protection interventions that cater to specific needs and vulnerabilities. Three main goals are being pursued: emergency service provision in line with SPHERE standards; ensuring the transition from care and maintenance to solutions in light of the non-camp context; and strengthening the resilience of refugees and host communities by supporting basic needs with increased interventions aimed at promoting livelihoods.

Fair protection processes and documentation

Reception conditions

Registration and profiling

- Improve reception conditions in transit and reception centres (TC/RC): provide communal shelter and sanitation, cooked food and access to safe water
- Ensure Burundian refugees continue to be granted prima facie status
- Review the current government Refugee Information Management System (RIMS) coverage to ensure it becomes protection-friendly and that data access is provided to UNHCR
- Undertake early screening at first point of arrival to identify SGBV survivors and other individuals requiring urgent attention
- Support the OPM with individually documenting all refugees and providing them with identity cards
- Strengthen the individual case management and filing system
- Enhance access to civil documentation including birth, marriage and death certificates
- Provide training to Government officials on refugee protection
- Carry out capacity building of police (staffing, posts, training) and establish a Refugee Settlement Police Protection Unit
- Identify refugees with legal needs and ensure effective referral to appropriate legal representation and attention
- Monitor return intentions

ZAMBIA

Existing response

Asylum-seekers from Burundi arrive by boat in Mpulungu and Nakonde, two localities on Lake Tanganyika, in the far north of the country. New arrivals who report to immigration officials and request asylum are screened by a District Joint Operational Committee (DJOC) composed of immigration, police, army, and intelligence officials. The DJOC verifies the identity of asylum-seekers and examines their reasons for fleeing their country of origin. Screenings are carried out with a view to separating armed elements, combatants and other individuals considered a threat to national security. The DJOC also determines whether new arrivals should be recognized as refugees pursuant to the 1969 OAU Convention criteria. Asylum-seekers who are not granted refugee status are referred to the Commissioner for Refugees (COR) in Lusaka for individual status determination and may appear in front of the national eligibility committee. Upon recognition, refugees are transferred to settlements in Meheba (North-Western Province) or Mayukwayukwa (Western Province) in line with Zambia's encampment policy. Pending status determination by the DJOC, Burundian asylum-seekers are temporarily hosted in the Meheba transit centre. The COR is part of the Ministry of Home Affairs and works closely with UNHCR. It is currently carrying out the majority of registrations in the capital, Lusaka. However, a few cases have been transferred directly from the border area to the Meheba settlement and registered by COR registration officers. In Lusaka, new arrivals are hosted at the Makeni transit centre. If they are found to be vulnerable, they are transferred by bus to the Meheba settlement after registration.

Since April 2015, the Office of the COR has registered over 1,600 new arrivals. Some 660 persons have been relocated to the Meheba settlement, and another 940 have settled in Lusaka or await relocation to Meheba. The majority of the refugees come from the provinces of Bujumbura, Rumonge and Cibitoke. Upon arrival, they receive family tents and, after three months, simple building materials (e.g. thatch, sun-baked bricks), which are purchased locally and distributed. These materials enable refugees to construct their own dwellings in the allocated settlement areas. They also receive cash assistance for a period of 12 months and are then expected to grow crops on the plots that the Government has allocated.

Strategy and coordination

Refugee matters are dealt with by the Office of the COR, under the purview of the Ministry for Home Affairs. The COR is responsible for the reception, accommodation and onward transportation of new arrivals. It is predominantly funded by UNHCR and partly under Zambia's national budget. The governmental response to a potential refugee influx would be coordinated by COR at all levels.

New arrivals continue to be accommodated among refugee communities in the Meheba or Mayukwayukwa refugee settlements, to the greatest degree possible. The planning figure for 2016 is relatively low (3,000 persons), and the strategy is therefore to include these new arrivals into existing systems and structures. Should the number of arrivals exceed 5,000, the UN country team will be mobilized. In all sectors, and as far as possible, the provision of basic services is ensured through existing local government bodies. UNHCR provides additional monetary and material support through its Government partners, the Ministries of Health and Education and of Community Development and Child Health. Services for persons with specific needs, including response for survivors of SGBV and child protection services for unaccompanied and separated children, have been strengthened to account for a potential increase in beneficiaries.

Should the number of arrivals by boat increase, services at the reception centre at the border will have to be enhanced, and Government partners will require support to ensure that basic food and shelter needs are met and that the timely transfer to refugee settlements takes place. For the time being, limited amounts of core relief items (e.g. tents, kitchen sets and blankets) have been prepositioned at entry points. Finally, given the importance of ensuring access to asylum and protection from refoulement, the capacity of UNHCR's Government counterparts has been reinforced with refresher training sessions and joint border monitoring missions.
