4. The methodology and format followed in this Addendum follows a thematic clustering of the recommendations based on the intersectionality of the thematic issues as well as the established domestic implementation mechanisms. To this end, it is important to note that the South African government will, in future, be issuing periodic reports on the status of implementation as required.

6. Pursuant to the foregoing framework, the Government of the Republic of South Africa has decided on three categories of annexes to this Addendum covering recommendations according to their acceptance, non-acceptance and rejection. Kindly refer in this regard to the Annexes to the present Addendum. It should also be borne in mind that the economic, social and cultural rights are being implemented progressively to the best availability of resources and in accordance with Constitutional imperatives. All the Annexes to the present Addendum are arranged according to paragraph 124 in document A/HRC/21/16 and also follow the thematic clustering outlined in paragraph 5 above.

III. Conclusion

7. The Government of the Republic of South Africa wishes to acknowledge and report its appreciation for the excellent interaction with the UN Human Rights UPR process and the majority of the recommendations which are deemed as constructive and helpful to the countries future efforts towards the achievement of its ideal, namely, social cohesion predicated on respect for human dignity and fundamental human rights and freedoms. The Government is resolute on its National Agenda to ensure, respect for, promotion, protection and fulfillment of all human rights and freedoms on a non-discriminatory basis. Most of the rights to be attained are in the rubric of economic, cultural and social rights and thereby requiring availability of adequate resources. It should be borne in mind that these rights will be realized progressively. The Government also has a commitment to allocate resources for the realisation of the MDGs by 2015. We pledge to work collaboratively and through international cooperation with all partners to this end. The next South African UPR report will, among others, be an encapsulation of progressive achievements in the intervening period.
