Paragraph 1.11

Turkmenistan, strongly condemning international terrorism as a terrible evil directed against all mankind and an attempt to undermine the basis of contemporary civilization, endeavours to strengthen cooperation with the world community in combating international terrorism. Mutual assistance is afforded among domestic counter-terrorism bodies and the counter-terrorism bodies and services of foreign

States on the basis of bilateral and multilateral agreements, including interdepartmental agreements.

The conclusion of such agreements is the basis for conducting operational and investigative measures and procedural actions, searching for persons who have committed terrorist crimes and so forth.

The extradition of persons who have committed a crime is effected on the basis of article 9 of the Criminal Code of Turkmenistan.

Mutual legal assistance is provided by the States members of the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) on the basis of the Convention on Legal Assistance and Legal Relations in Civil, Family and Criminal Cases (Minsk Convention), signed in Minsk on 22 January 1993, and on the basis of the bilateral treaties and agreements on legal assistance and legal relations concluded between Turkmenistan and Georgia, Uzbekistan, Kazakhstan, Armenia and the Islamic Republic of Iran.

The transfer of sentenced persons is effected on the basis of the Agreement on the procedure for the transfer and transit of persons taken into custody, concluded by the Ministries of Internal Affairs of the CIS States members in Ashgabat on 17 February 1997. Turkmenistan has also concluded a Treaty with the Russian Federation on the transfer of persons sentenced to imprisonment for the purpose of serving a sentence. In accordance with the inter-State treaties concluded by Turkmenistan, and where there are legal grounds for this, Turkmenistan does not exclude the possibility of considering a request from another State for the freezing of funds intended for terrorist purposes.

Turkmenistan, in accordance with international agreements, shall cooperate in the area of combating terrorism with foreign States, their law enforcement agencies and special services, and also with international organizations engaged in combating terrorism; it shall provide assistance to other States in connection with criminal investigations or the criminal prosecution of persons linked to the financing or support of terrorist activities, including assistance in transmitting the available evidence needed for such prosecution.

“2. Turkmenistan, guided by its interest in ensuring the security of individuals, society and the State, shall carry out the criminal prosecution in its territory of persons engaged in terrorist activity, including cases of terrorist acts planned or conducted outside Turkmenistan that are nonetheless prejudicial to Turkmenistan and other cases provided for under the international agreements to which Turkmenistan is a party.

“3. Turkmenistan, in accordance with its own national legislation and the norms of international law, shall prevent and suppress the financing of terrorist activities and shall promptly block funds and other financial assets, deposits, economic resources and material assets of persons who commit or attempt to commit terrorist acts or assist in their commission of organizations directly or indirectly owned or under the control of such persons; and of persons and organizations operating on behalf of or on instructions from such persons and organizations, including funds received or obtained by them or with the use of property owned by them, directly or indirectly or under the control of such persons or persons and organizations associated with them.”

The introduction by Turkmenistan of national regulations enabling it to cooperate with other countries, in the absence of bilateral intergovernmental or international agreements, is not advisable.

On the basis of reciprocity, in the absence of bilateral treaties and international agreements, Turkmenistan in practice always provides legal assistance on criminal matters to other countries for the execution of specific court proceedings, if this does not conflict with the legislation of Turkmenistan or prejudice the sovereignty and security of our State.

Issues related to extradition, the transfer of criminal proceedings and the transfer of sentenced persons to serve a further sentence are dealt with exclusively on the basis of bilateral intergovernmental treaties and international agreements.
