Enclosure

Response of the Republic of the Marshall Islands to the implementation of United Nations Security Council resolution 1373 (2001)

Introduction

The Republic of the Marshall Islands (RMI), a group of atolls located in the North Pacific Ocean, is a sovereign country in free association with the United States. The population of RMI is approximately 65,000.

The financial system in RMI is a relatively small one, with total banking system asset of $87.2 million and total deposit of $77.4 million. Structurally, the industry comprises of three banks¹ -- two of which are FDIC (Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation) covered and therefore subjected to the stringent AML requirements of the U.S. Bank Secrecy Act and the Patriot Act--, a government owned development bank whose primary function is to render development lending in government prioritized sectors, and several low-volume insurance agencies that primarily sell policies on behalf of foreign insurance companies.

The financial sector is highly monetized with domestic deposit exceeding 50% of Gross Domestic Deposit. In realization of the country's vulnerability to systemic shock in the financial sector, the Government had introduced a reform program geared toward enhancing transparency, accountability and good governance. Amongst other initiatives, the reform program calls for the establishment of the requisite infrastructure for detecting, preventing, and combating money laundering.

Background

Following FATF's (Financial Action Task Force) June 2000 designation of the Marshall Islands as non-cooperative jurisdiction in the international efforts to combat money laundering, GRMI enacted an Anti-money Laundering legislation that addressed most, if not all the concerns raised by FATE. The law, which was enacted in October 31 2000 criminalizes money laundering, requires institutions to undertake vigilance in customer identification and record keeping as well as suspicious transaction reporting. The law additionally establishes regulatory authority within the Banking Commission, relaxes secrecy obligations under all laws of RMI, and provides mechanisms for forfeiture and confiscation of tainted assets, exchange of information and international cooperation.

In September 2002, amendments were made to the Anti-money laundering Act, to remove the $10,000 threshold for transaction record keeping and to provide for the reporting of large currency transactions (over $10,000) and civil money penalty. Implementing regulations have been promulgated and have also accounted for the latest amendments to the AML law.

Specific Initiatives

Since passage of its AML law and the subsequent promulgation of implementing regulations, the RMI has undertaken a number of initiatives to further strengthen its AML regime. Some of these are highlighted below:

REGULATORY FRAMEWORK

The main focus of the Republic of the Marshall Islands in 2002 was to establish an effective regulatory scheme to implement the Banking Amendment Act. The Commissioner of Banking and members from the Office of Attorney General worked with the FDIC to draft a set of regulations that provide the criteria and standards for reporting and compliance as required under the Act. The regulations, codified on May 27, 2002, and slightly amended September 2002, are modeled after the anti-money laundering regulations established in the United States and Australia. The regulations include the following: 1) ownership control reporting requirements for financial institutions and cash dealers; 2) establishment of written anti-money laundering policies, appointment of compliance officers within each financial institutions and cash dealers, and training programs by financial institutions and cash dealers; 3) record keeping requirements for accounts; 4) record keeping requirements for transactions; 5) suspicious transaction reports; 6) cash transaction reports; and 7) civil monetary penalties.

To date, the Banking Commission has issued two sets of advisories on suspicious transaction reporting and large currency transaction reporting. The Advisories are accompanied by reporting forms and instructions that mirrors those used in the United States. As a supplement to the Advisories, Guidelines on customer due diligence and record keeping have also been issued to the industry. The United Nations Drug Control and Crime Prevention Program provided technical Assistance on the framing of the Guidelines.

Additionally, the Banking Commission and the Attorney General's Office worked with FDIC on the formulation of a set of examination policies and an examination procedures manual. Both sets of documents are being used by examiners from the Banking Commission as guides in the on-site reviews of bank's and financial institutions' compliance with the AML law and regulations.

FINANCIAL INTELLIGENCE UNIT

RMI's financial intelligence unit is now fully operational and has formally entered the Egmont Group of FIUs. FIU processes – receiving, analyzing, and dissemination of financial intelligence -- have been streamlined. Standard Operating Procedures have been established to systemize the FIU process. An electronic database that is Excel-based has been created and all disclosures from the financial industry are recorded and analyzed electronically. With the recently secured Technical Assistance from the United States Department of State, the database will be upgraded to enable remote on-line access by all members of the FIU.

At present, the FIU database stands at 1,500 CTRs, 5 SARs, and several in-bound and out-bound request for assistance.

COMPLIMENTARY LAWS

1. At its meeting on 8 August 2002, the Cabinet approved (C.M. 111(2002)) the enactment of the following legislations to implement the Honiara Declarations and the U.N. Resolution 1373: (1) Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters Act, 2002 (2) The Controlled Substance Act, 2002 (3) The Transnational Extradition and Transfer of Convicted Persons Act of the Year 2002 (4) The Foreign Evidence Act, 2002 (5) The Omnibus Counter-Terrorism Act, 2002.

While not a signatory to the Vienna Convention, the RMI is moving forward to enact legislations envisaged under the Convention. In October 2002, RMI's Parliament has enacted a Proceeds of Crime Act, Foreign Evidence Act, Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters Act, and a Counter-Terrorism Act.

RATIFICATION OF INTERNATIONAL CONVENTIONS

Approval of the ratification of all 12 UN Counter Terrorism Conventions have been obtained from both the Executive and the Legislative branches. RMI is party to 6 of the 12 conventions and protocols (which are civil aviation and maritime conventions): (1) The International Convention on Offences and Certain Other Acts Committed on Board Aircraft (2) The Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft (3) The Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation (4) The Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation (5) The Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts of Violence at Airports Serving International Civil Aviation (6) The Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms located on the Continental Shelf. RMI's Parliament, Nitijela, recently passed resolutions in its last sitting session of January 2002 approving the ratification of the remaining 6 counter-terrorism conventions. Currently arrangements are being made to deposit instruments of accession to 1) The International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism 2) The International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings 3) The Convention on the Marking of Plastic Explosives for the Purpose of Detection 4) The Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Weapons 5) The International Convention against the Taking of Hostages and 6) The Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Domestic Agents.

INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION

In June 2002, the Marshall Islands DFIU, after being sponsored by the United States, was granted full membership in the Egmont Group. Membership in the Egmont Group is highly valued by the Marshall Islands because it enables the DFIU to develop communications with other financial intelligence units (FIUs). In fact, the benefits of membership have already occurred. Australia is seeking to sign an information sharing agreement with the Marshall Islands.

During that same period, the Marshall Islands also became a member of the Asia/Pacific Group on Money Laundering. The Marshall Islands looks forward to using the Asia/Pacific Group to develop and strengthen its ties with the other member states in the region.

RMI is also a founding member of the recently established Pacific Islands Financial Supervisors, a group of regulators from the PIF (Pacific Islands Forum) countries that will be representing the region in the Basel Group.

ON-SITE EXAMINATION

Since the establishment of the statutory and regulatory framework, the Banking Commission has conducted on-site examinations of financial institutions and cash dealers. The examination process comes in three parts: (1) Core Analysis, (2) Expanded Analysis, and (3) Impact Analysis. Core analysis has been completed for the all institutions and expanded analysis has commenced for one of the three banks. On-site examination for safety and soundness as well as for AML compliance has been made a routine task for the Commission and will be undertaken on a yearly basis.

THE WAY FORWARD

For the Republic of the Marshall Islands, effective implementation will be a key factor in the reform that is well underway.

Operative Paragraph 1

Sub-paragraph (a) What measures if any have been taken to prevent and suppress the financing of terrorist acts in addition to those listed in your responses to questions on I(b) to (d):

1. In October 2000, RMI enacted its anti-money laundering legislation. This has served as the legislative basis for all anti-money laundering initiatives – including suppression of terrorist financing -- undertaken by the Republic. Among other things, the Act in effect: (a) criminalizes money laundering; (b) establishes requirements for customer identification and record keeping; (c) requires the reporting of suspicious transactions by financial institutions and cash dealers; (d) establishes supervisory authority with the Commissioner of Banking; (e) overrides any secrecy obligation; (f) establishes the means for freezing and forfeiture of assets in relation to money laundering; and (g) facilitates international cooperation and mutual assistance in deterring money laundering.
2. Through a Cabinet Directive (C.M. 236(2000)), RMI established its Financial Intelligence Unit in November 21, 2000. Formally called the Domestic Financial Intelligence Unit, the Unit is currently in full operation and is in constant contact with FinCEN and has formally entered the Egmont Group of FIUs. FIU processes – receiving, analyzing, and dissemination of financial intelligence -- have been streamlined. Standard Operating Procedures have been established to systemize the FIU process. An electronic database that is Excel-based has been created and all disclosures from the financial industry are recorded and analyzed electronically. With the recently secured Technical Assistance from the United States Department of State, the database will be upgraded to enable remote on-line access by all members of the FIU.
3. The Banking Commission's Advisory A-01 instructs banks and financial institutions to report to the Commission or the DFUI any suspicious transactions or activities being transacted through or conducted within the institutions. Advisory A-02, issued in March 14, 2002, mandates the reporting of currency transactions exceeding $10,000.

4. Upon receipt of the OFAC List from the U.S. Embassy in Majuro, the Banking Commission had issued Advisory B-01, instructing banks and financial institutions to search their records for possible matches on the list and subsequently to freeze related accounts/transactions in case of positive match. The List was again updated on 27 September 2001, 18 October 2001, 28 December 2001, and 13 May 2002 through Advisory B-02, Advisory B-03, Advisory B-04 and Advisory B-05 respectively. Up till now, no match has been identified by financial industry and the Commission has advised the industry to enhance their customer due diligence process. Banks especially have been put on alert for possible transaction from each of the individual and organizations on the OFAC List.
5. Beginning in March 2002, the Banking Commission has commenced its periodic audit of Banks to ensure their compliance with the AML legislation. As part of this process, the examiners are required to look into the processes undertaken by the financial institutions in compliance with Advisory B. The Commission is satisfied with the result of the audit, which utilizes examination procedures established by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Sub-paragraph (b) – What are the offences and penalties in your country with respect to the activities listed in this sub-paragraph? ‘(b) Criminalize the willful provision or collection, by any means, directly or indirectly, of funds by their nationals or in their territories with the intention that the funds should be used, or in the knowledge that they are to be used, in order to carry out terrorist acts’

1. Terrorism and terrorist financing are not specifically criminalized under existing RMI laws; However, certain acts which may be integral to terrorism and terrorist financing have been criminalized under the Criminal Code and the AML legislation. At present, the RMI relies on its Criminal Code and Banking Act – within which the AML legislation is incorporated – for administrative and criminal sanctions related to terrorism.
2. The CT legislation, which will criminalize terrorism and define criminal and administrative sanctions to impose for such act, is being submitted to the Nitijela for enactment during its 24th Regular Session, which is currently on break and is expected to resume on 12 September 2002.

Sub-paragraph (c) – What legislations and procedures exist for freezing accounts and assets at banks and financial institutions?

1. At present, the mechanism defined under the AML legislation may be utilized for freezing account/asset. Upon suspicion, the Commissioner of Banking or the Attorney General has a 24-hour window of opportunity for seizure and detention after which a court order is required.

2. Conviction is required for confiscation of assets. And either the Commissioner of Banking or the Attorney General is required to obtain a judicial order for any confiscation.

3. Section 8 of the Counter-Terrorism Act, 2002, states that

1. “Any person convicted of a terrorism offense shall be liable to forfeit to the Marshall Islands, irrespective of any other provision of law: (a) any property, real or personal, owned, possessed, or used by a person involved in the offense; (b) any property constituting, or derived from, and proceeds the person obtained, directly or indirectly, as the result of such offense; and (c) any of the property used in any matter or part, to commit, or to facilitate the commission of, such offense;

For the purpose of forfeiture proceedings under this section, a temporary restraining order and seizure warrant may be entered upon application of the Attorney General without notice or opportunity for a hearing when an information or complaint has not yet been filed with respect to the property, where there is probable cause to believe that the property with respect to which the order is sought would, in the event of conviction, be subject to forfeiture under this section and exigent circumstances exist that place the life or health of any person in danger.

4. The provisions of this section shall be implemented without prejudice to the rights of third parties acting in good faith.

5. The owner or possessor of any property seized under this section shall be liable to the Marshall Islands for any expenses incurred incident to the seizure, including any expenses relating to the handling, storage, transportation, and destruction or other disposition of the seized property.”

Membership in the Egmont Group is highly valued by the Marshall Islands because it enables the DFIU to develop communications with other financial intelligence units (FIUs). In fact, the benefits of membership have already occurred. Australia is seeking to sign an information sharing agreement with the Marshall Islands.

During that same period, the Marshall Islands also became a member of the Asia/Pacific Group on Money Laundering. The Marshall Islands looks forward to using the Asia/Pacific Group to develop and strengthen its ties with the other member states in the region.

Additionally, on 6 January 2003, a letter of agreement on combatting money laundering between the Government of the United States of America (USG) and the Government of the Republic of the Marshall Islands (GRMI) was signed. Actions to be taken include the purchase and installation of computer equipments that will be used for storage and analysis of financial disclosures from RMI's financial industry.
