What Should You Expect from Your Legal Representative?

Only two groups of people may provide legal advice and services in your immigration case:

- attorneys and
- accredited representatives who work for non-profit religious, charitable, or social service organizations established in the U.S. and recognized by the Board of Immigration Appeals (BIA).

ATTORNEYS

- In the U.S., an attorney is someone who:
 - attended law school and received a Juris Doctor (J.D.) degree;
 - is a licensed member of a state bar association in "good standing;" and
 - passed an exam given by the state bar association.

An attorney also is called a "lawyer."

- Attorneys can give legal advice and provide legal services. They can file papers and applications and represent you before:
 - The Department of Homeland Security (DHS)
 - The U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Service (USCIS)
 - Any immigration court
 - The Board of Immigration Appeals (BIA)
 - The state court where he/she is a member of the bar
- You can ask to see your attorney's licensing documents. You should make a note of the admission number if any.
 - There are two places you can learn whether an attorney is licensed and in "good standing":
 - State Bar Associations keep track of attorneys. A list of the State Bar Associations in the U.S. can be found at http://www.abanet.org/barserv/stlobar.html.
 - o The American Immigration Lawyers Association (AILA) can help you find an immigration lawyer. Call 1-800-954-0254 to speak with a representative or send an e-mail to ilrs@aila.org.

ACCREDITED REPRESENTATIVES

- > An accredited representative has been given permission by the BIA to provide immigration legal services.
 - Generally, a fully accredited representative may represent you before:
 - The Department of Homeland Security (DHS)
 - o The U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Service (USCIS)
 - Any immigration court
 - The Board of Immigration Appeals (BIA)
 - A partially accredited representative can only represent you before USCIS.
 - An accredited representative cannot represent you in state court on non-immigration matters.
- > The best way to know that an individual is a legitimate accredited representative is to ask to see a copy of the BIA decision accrediting representative status to the accredited representative and to the BIA recognized organization. Keep in mind that an accredited representative's status expires every 3 years unless the BIA renews it.
 - You can also view a list of the non-profit organizations and accredited representatives recognized by the BIA on its website, www.usdoj.eoir/statspub/raroster.htm.

What You Should Expect from Your Legal Representative

Your attorney or accredited representative cannot share what you tell him with anyone else, unless you give him permission to do so. Your legal representative works for you, he does not work for the government.

> Your legal representative should:

- Help you find an interpreter
- Be patient and listen carefully to you
- Not harass you about payment
- Explain your options and what is going to happen in court
- Check on the progress of your case
- Keep you informed about your case and answer your questions
- Return your phone calls promptly
- Keep appointments with you

What You Can Do if You Have a Problem with Your Attorney or Accredited Representative

- You have the right to hire or fire your attorney or accredited representative, and you should not accept any legal representation that you do not understand or that makes you feel uncomfortable.
- > Get help if you think your legal representative has cheated you or works for traffickers.
 - Contact a non-profit law office, immigrant rights group, or other trusted community organization for advice. They might be able to tell you how to fire or file a complaint against your legal representative.
 - Contact the State Bar Association for the state where your lawyer is licensed. A list of the State Bar Associations in the U.S. can be found at http://www.abanet.org/barserv/stlobar.html.
 - If your legal representative represented you before the immigration court or the BIA, you can file an Immigration Practitioner Complaint Form (Form EOIR-44) with the Executive Office for Immigration Review. The form can be found at http://www.usdoj.gov/eoir/eoirforms/eoir44.pdf.
