Budgets and Expenditure for Iraq

Operational context

The overall security and political situation in Iraq remained stable until the last quarter of 2019, when mass demonstrations erupted across the central and southern governorates, resulting in the resignation of the Prime Minister. The escalation of hostilities between major actors in the region, coupled with the ongoing protests, resulted in a fragile security and political context that compromised the stability, transition, and reconciliation efforts achieved thus far. UNHCR's access to people of concern in certain locations was affected as a result of these events. Moreover, following military operations in the north-east of the Syrian Arab Republic (Syria) in mid-October, more than 17,000 Syrian refugees fled into Iraq, requiring the operation to redirect significant resources to address the emergency.

Protection risks for displaced people remained acute, with many IDP and returnee families affected by physical insecurity, limited freedom of movement, confiscation of documents, detention, forced evictions and an increased risk of sexual and gender-based violence. Poor economic conditions further hindered the access of many families to medical care and adequate shelter, occasionally leading to negative coping mechanisms. Likewise, thousands of refugee families had limited livelihood opportunities, which translated into poor economic conditions and increased protection concerns. The protracted presence of refugees, as well as the influx of Syrian refugees, further stretched existing public services.

Population trends

By the end of 2019, there were a total of 1.4 million IDPs; 4.6 million returnees (between 2014 and 2019); 286,900 refugees and asylum-seekers; and 47,300 stateless persons in Iraq.

The IDP population decreased by 388,200 individuals during the year, 38% of whom previously resided in camps. Of the total 1.4 million individuals who remained internally displaced, 63% lived in private accommodation, with the remaining 37% residing in one of the 67 IDP camps across Iraq. While no official figures were available, it was estimated that some 4,200 Iraqi refugees returned from Syria and Turkey during the year.

Out of the total 286,900 registered refugees and asylum-seekers, 245,800 were Syrian and the remaining 41,100 were of other nationalities (mainly Turkish, Iranian, Palestinian, and Sudanese). Most Syrian refugees (99%) lived in the Kurdistan Region of Iraq, 71% of whom were women and children.

Achievements

- UNHCR successfully accommodated over 17,000 refugees fleeing the north-east of Syria by renovating and expanding two camps and supporting registration activities to enable refugees to move out of camps.
- Following UNHCR advocacy, the Iraqi Ministry of Interior decided to register Syrian refugees under the 1971 Political Refugee Act at the federal level, providing them with increased protection from refoulement and freedom of movement.

Unmet needs

- The operation was 32% funded at the end of 2019.
- Access to civil documentation remained a challenge for thousands of IDPs and returnees.
- Further interventions were needed to support reconciliation and reconstruction effort to ensure the reintegration and access to essential services for returnees.
- Large gaps remained in addressing the increasing needs of displaced people in Iraq, both in terms of emergency humanitarian responses and development activities.
