AMERICAS MONTHLY REPORT

This document provides an overview of key developments affecting the displacement situation in the Americas and some UNHCR response activities in line with the 2020 strategic objectives for the region.

PARTNERSHIP IN THE AMERICAS

216 PARTNER AGREEMENTS
SIGNED IN 2020
in Americas

83 MILLION TO BE CHANNLED
through partners

3 in 4 partners are national

Working with partners provides an opportunity for synergies to be derived from two organizations with shared humanitarian principles and a commitment to a common objective of working together. In case of national partners and the civil society, they can offer local knowledge and access, while also helping to promote sustainability and the development of local capacity.

In the Americas, UNHCR has formalized strategic partnerships with some 216 partners, including 204 non-governmental organizations (NGOs), 11 governmental institutions and 1 United Nations agency. In 2019, 29 per cent of our total expenditure was entrusted with partners undertaking programmes or projects to provide protection and solutions to people forced to flee.

In line with its Grand Bargain commitments to improving the effectiveness and efficiency of humanitarian action, UNHCR aims to increasingly engage local and national partners in country operations. Illustrative of this, in 2016, about 20 per cent of the $1.4 billion were disbursed by UNHCR to more than 900 local and national partners for programmes providing protection and solutions to refugees and other people of concern. In 2020, UNHCR aims to raise this globally to 25 per cent. In the Americas, 75 per cent of our partners are national or local organizations.

VENEZUELA SITUATION

4.9 MILLION
REFUGEES AND MIGRANTS

from Venezuela living abroad

(as of 5 March 2020)

4.1 MILLION
in Latin America and the Caribbean states

(as of 5 March 2020)

OVER 2.5 MILLION VENEZUELANAS WITH
REGULAR STATUS including resident permits
(as of 5 March 2020)

KEY DEVELOPMENTS

Colombia's new official figures of Venezuelans as of 31 December 2019 show a 10 per cent increase in comparison to October 2019, totalling 1,771,237 Venezuelans in Colombia - 57.5% in irregular situation-. By departments, Bogota D.C. tops with 352,431 Venezuelans, followed by Norte de Santander (202,727), Atlantico (167,604), La Guajira (165,475) and Antioquia (149,475). This large increase – 10% in three months – highlights the continuing needs in the country and the increasing concentration of population lacking options to move in other countries in the region.

The Colombian Government announced the creation of two new Special Stay Permits \(PEP\) that seek to benefit more than 100,000 Venezuelans, by allowing them to stay and work in the country. The two new Permits will benefit Venezuelans who entered Colombia before 29 November 2019 with stamped passports as well as those currently in an irregular situation but holding an offer of employment for a period of at least two months up to a maximum of two years.

Bolivia's newly appointed National Commission on Refugees recognized in February 2020 the first 56 Venezuelan refugees, based on the 1951 Refugee Convention and the UNHCR Guidance Note on the Outflow of Venezuelans (May 2019).

In Brazil, new documents to be issued to asylum seekers in all States of the federation were approved. The measure, which follows a two-year piloting process and will be applied in six-month time, represents a major achievement aimed at improving access to rights. The lack of national document was one of the reasons why some Venezuelans decided not to apply for asylum and to apply for temporary residence instead.

In Ecuador, some 28,000 Temporary Residence Visas for Humanitarian Reasons have been issued to Venezuelans so far within the Registration and Regularization process that will conclude on 31 March 2020.

During the month, expressions of xenophobia and increased security controls and protests were reported in Peru, Ecuador and Brazil against Venezuelans. This trend is of high concern to UNHCR as Venezuelans may be exposed to heightened risks of being stigmatized and used as a scapegoats.

INSIDE VENEZUELA

During February, localised situations increased difficulties to implement programs in support of 54 communities, as clashes continue between armed groups and security forces along the border with Colombia in the state of Táchira. In Amazonas and Zulia states, operations of armed actors were reported. An outbreak of tuberculosis in Petare, Greater Caracas, increased the difficulties and risks to access the most vulnerable population.

In border areas with Colombia, UNHCR focuses on actions to improve the living conditions of a population affected by blackouts, lack of basic services and goods. In San Cristóbal, UNHCR delivered 46 solar streetlights to be installed in strategic locations such as health centres or schools, to reduce protection risks at night. In Guasdalito, 44 families received hygiene kits to improve their health conditions, but also to avoid security risks during border crossings to acquire essential goods as medicines or soap. In La Victoria, Apure, 35 portable cooking appliances will support 200 residents to improve the quality of food.

To strengthen community structures and their capacity to impulse protective environments, UNHCR in Maracaibo accompanied the local youth network of Gran Sabana as they hosted a cultural activity for 190 persons about services provided by UNHCR and partners.

UNHCR supported shelters. Other 117 people received information on services and rights. Some 14 vulnerable women received cash transfers to cover accommodation expenses and other basic needs.

Ensuring access to protection – To identify persons of concern to UNHCR in vulnerable situations, and to facilitate the delivery of assistance, services and protection, UNHCR set up the PRIMES tool (Population Registration and Identity Management EcoSystem). In Colombia, by the end of February, some 18,824 persons (8,699 cases) were already registered. In Guyana, where PRIMES was rolled out during 2019, national authorities and UNHCR conducted the first registration mission to the remote southwest area where 45 Venezuelans were registered and documented with Government Registration Certificates and stay permits.

As a result of joint efforts of Brazil's national authorities and UNHCR, 106 Venezuelan indigenous Warao people were registered as asylum seekers. Many of them had been undocumented since they arrived in Belem do Pará back in 2017. Challenges to register the remaining 400 persist due to language limitations issues and the constant mobility of this indigenous population. Read more here.

In Norte de Santander (Colombia), survivors of sexual and gender-based violence can now access a safe house, run by a local UNHCR partner. Up to 25 people will receive shelter, psychosocial and therapeutic care, legal assistance and health services.

Considering the risks faced by the displaced population living with HIV, support to access health services is being provided in border areas. In Tumbes (Peru), 60 Venezuelans living with HIV were provided with psychosocial support and accompaniment to public health services by UNHCR and partner PROSA. 85 people could also benefit with rapid detection tests.

Pursuing durable solutions – In order to promote local integration, the Colombian Local Ombudsman's Office and UNHCR launched a joint publication on the situation in Bogotá of people arriving from Venezuela. As the report highlights, streamlining attention services and foster joint initiatives to prevent xenophobia require increased cooperation of authorities and other service providers. The report is available here.

As a result of the Sunshine Bouquet project supported by UNHCR and flower companies in Colombia, some 677 Venezuelan refugees and migrants and Colombian returnees had a seasonal employment to harvest and pack flowers ahead of Valentine's Day.

Continuing with a sustained strategy in Ecuador to foster inclusive education environments, 12 additional schools were trained on the Respiramos Inclusion ("We Breathe Inclusion") anti-discrimination methodology during February. By the end of 2020, with UNHCR support, some 174 schools will be using the methodology promoting inclusion and diversity within the school system, which has been recognized by the Ministry of Education as a best practice.

In Peru, UNHCR supported financial inclusion and entrepreneurship workshops organized by partner Encuentros for some 45 refugees and migrants to strengthen the access to livelihoods and labour opportunities.

FUNDING THE RESPONSE

UNHCR's overall requirements for its comprehensive response in the Americas currently totals $528.1 million. UNHCR's overall requirements by the end of 2019 was 69 per cent funded, meaning the response faced considerable constraints to meet even the most basic survival needs of those affected by the complex displacement situation across the region.

During 2020, lack of enough funds may jeopardize critical activities as the provision of core relief items or shelters. The exercise of rights of those forced to flee could be diminished, affecting their access to territory, to strengthened asylum systems and adequate mechanisms to prevent gender-based violence. Besides, lack of funding can hamper the opportunities of refugees to integrate and earn a dignified living in their hosting communities; while efforts to tackle xenophobia and discrimination would be affected across the region.

THE IMPORTANCE OF FLEXIBLE FUNDING FOR UNHCR'S

Flexible financial support allows UNHCR to place funds anywhere within a given situation, in line with the Office's priorities, from where people in need are forced to flee, to where they find refuge. Flexible funding needs to be timely for UNHCR to plan in the most efficient manner, allocating to priorities first.

UNHCR's humanitarian response in the Americas is made possible thanks to the generous support of major donors who have contributed unrestricted funding to UNHCR's global operations, and to donors who have generously contributed directly to UNHCR Americas operations.
