The CCCM Cluster

What?

CCCM (Camp Coordination and Camp Management) is a vital form of humanitarian assistance because it coordinates protection and assistance to displaced populations forced to flee their homes due to natural disaster or conflict.

Where?

The term camp is used to refer to many types of displacement site: camps, collective centres, spontaneous sites, temporary settlements and transit and return centres.

Who?

The CCCM Cluster is made up of 15 partner agencies, which are co-led by IOM (natural disasters) and UNHCR (conflict situations).

How?

Globally: standards and policy setting, building response capacity, operational support)
Country: development and support for national strategies and plans
Field/Regional: coordination of multiple displacement sites
Community: management of a single displacement site

Levels of Response

Administration

Administration refers to the functions carried out by governments and national authorities that relate to the oversight and supervision of activities in displacement sites.

Coordination

Coordination entails creating the access and delivery of humanitarian services and protection to displacement sites and the coordination of roles and responsibilities in the overall humanitarian response.

Management

Management encompasses those activities in one displacement site that focus on the coordination of services, establishment of governance and community mobilization mechanisms, maintenance of infrastructure, data collection and sharing, provision of services and monitoring service delivery.
