TWO MEN REPORTEDLY TORTURED IN BARBADOS

Two men who are suspects in a robbery have reportedly been tortured while in police custody in the district of Christ Church. They have not received adequate medical treatment and remain at risk of further ill-treatment.

At 11am on 17 March, Adrian Mottley and Jamar Headley handed themselves in to Hastings police station in Christ Church, Barbados, after learning they were wanted by the police in connection with a robbery at an amusement arcade. Both men were accompanied by their lawyer, who ensured that his clients' good health was certified by a doctor just before they were taken into police custody.

Four hours later, the lawyer received a call from Adrian Mottley who requested his urgent presence. When the lawyer arrived he saw that Adrian Mottley was in distress, he had a split lip and had vomit on his mouth. Shortly afterwards he fainted and began foaming at the mouth. The lawyer pleaded for first aid attention but he was ignored, and Adrian Mottley was dragged out of the interview room and handcuffed. Eventually he was taken for medical attention, but instead of being taken to hospital he was seen briefly by a general practitioner who reportedly prescribed him medication for anxiety. Adrian Mottley later told his lawyer that police officers had wrapped him in plastic wrap from his feet up to his neck and then beaten him around the body. The police refused to allow the lawyer to see Jamar Headley and was only able to see him later that night after he was transferred to another police station. Jamar Headley told his lawyer that he had been hit about the head by a blunt object he believed to be a book. On 18 March Adrian Mottley and Jamar Headley's lawyer filed a complaint regarding their ill-treatment at police headquarters.

The two men, who admit responsibility for the robbery, have said that they were beaten to coerce them into admitting responsibility for other robberies. They were eventually forced to into signing a confession saying that they were carrying a firearm during the arcade robbery, something which they deny. Their lawyer has stated that the two men are still being refused access to an independent doctor.

Please write immediately in English or your own language:

- √ Calling on the authorities to ensure that Adrian Mottley and Jamar Headley are protected from torture and ill-treatment, in line with the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners;
- √ Urging them to ensure that they are granted immediate access to adequate medical attention including examination by a doctor of their choosing with the results provided to their lawyer and families;
- √ Calling on the authorities to immediately initiate an independent investigation into allegations that the two men were tortured and their confessions obtained under duress, and bring those responsible to justice.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Adrian Mottley and Jamar Headley appeared in court on 19 March and were charged with aggravated robbery. They were denied bail as their confessions – which they claimed were signed under torture – stated that they had carried a firearm during the robbery. They have been transferred to the island's main prison and are scheduled to appear in court on 16 April.

Barbados has yet to ratify the United Nations Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. During the Universal Periodic Review of Barbados' fulfilment of its human rights obligations and commitments before the UN Human Rights Council in 2013, Barbados stated that it was unable to accept recommendations to sign the convention as it was not in a position to meet all the obligations contained in the treaty.

In March 2007 the UN Human Rights Committee stated that it was concerned about the lack of a legal definition of torture in Barbados' domestic law and recommended that the country introduce a legal definition of torture compatible with the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.
