C. Cooperation with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights

6. Bulgaria contributed financially to OHCHR in 2012 and 2013.³⁸

III. Implementation of international human rights obligations, taking into account applicable international humanitarian law

A. Equality and non-discrimination

7. The Human Rights Committee (HR Committee) was concerned that discriminatory practices against women remained widespread.³⁹ CEDAW reiterated its concern about stereotypical patterns regarding the roles and responsibilities of women and men in the family and society.⁴⁰

8. CEDAW continued to be concerned at the failure to specifically prohibit discrimination against women and that a gender equality law had not been adopted, despite the recommendations of CEDAW and UPR.⁴¹ In 2014, Bulgaria reported to CEDAW that a draft law on gender equality was being prepared.⁴²

9. CESCR was concerned at the gender disparity in education and employment.⁴³ CEDAW expressed similar concerns.⁴⁴ Furthermore, CEDAW was concerned about the vulnerability and marginalization of disadvantaged groups of women, such as women belonging to ethnic minorities, elderly women and women with disabilities, who often suffered from multiple forms of discrimination.⁴⁵

10. CEDAW recommended that Bulgaria diversify women's educational and professional choices, narrow and close the wage gap between women and men and strengthen the access of women, including Roma women and women belonging to other disadvantaged groups, to formal employment and entrepreneurship.⁴⁶

11. CAT was concerned at manifestations of discrimination and intolerance against certain national and religious minorities and persons belonging to sexual minorities.⁴⁷ The HR Committee and CESCR expressed similar concerns.⁴⁸

12. CAT was concerned that slogans amounting to hate speech had been voiced against minority groups, including by members of certain political parties and groups, and that intolerance towards religious minorities had resulted in vandalism of places of worship and attacks on worshippers.⁴⁹ The Independent Expert on minority issues stated that, despite the identification and arrest of individuals who had participated in violent attacks, there were few prosecutions and only small fines applied to those convicted.⁵⁰ The HR Committee regretted the poor enforcement of the legislation on anti-discrimination and hate speech.⁵¹

13. The HR Committee was concerned at the widespread discrimination against the Roma population, especially in access to education, employment, health and housing.⁵² The Independent Expert on minority issues stated that Roma experienced discrimination and exclusion in all walks of life. She highlighted racial prejudice against Roma and the negative media coverage and discriminatory stereotyping of the Roma by the media and in some political discourse. The Independent Expert concluded that the Government initiatives and financial commitments had failed to address discrimination, exclusion and poverty faced by Roma.⁵³

14. UNHCR stated that refugee issues continued to receive a wider coverage, characterized with frequent hate-filled xenophobic remarks and messages. It noted numerous incidents of violence based on anti-foreigner and specifically anti-refugee sentiment in 2013.⁵⁴

15. CAT recommended that Bulgaria eradicate stereotypes and discrimination against Roma and other national minorities, prohibit and prevent advocacy of hate speech, discrimination and intolerance and enforce anti-discrimination legislation.⁵⁵ UNHCR recommended that Bulgaria prevent and respond to incidents relating to racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance.⁵⁶

16. CAT recommended that offences motivated by discrimination constitute an aggravating circumstance in criminal prosecution.⁵⁷ The HR Committee recommended that Bulgaria investigate and sanction acts of hate crime, hate speech and harassment against minorities and religious communities.⁵⁸ CESCR⁵⁹ and the Independent Expert on minority issues⁶⁰ made related recommendations.

B. Right to life, liberty and security of the person

17. CAT was concerned that 238 institutionalized children with mental disabilities had died in the period 2000–2010 without a single indictment being made. It recommended that Bulgaria investigate, prosecute, convict and sanction those responsible for the deaths and strengthen legislation to enhance accountability and prevent recurrence and impunity.⁶¹

18. The HR Committee was concerned at the large number of cases of torture and other inhuman and degrading treatment and that none of those cases had resulted in sanctions against the police officers involved. It recommended that Bulgaria eradicate all forms of harassment by police and ill-treatment during investigations, prosecute perpetrators.⁶²

19. Furthermore, CAT urged Bulgaria to adopt a definition of torture, covering all the elements contained in the Convention and to include torture as a separate and specific crime in its legislation. Bulgaria should ensure that the absolute prohibition against torture is non-derogable and that acts amounting to torture are not subject to any statute of limitations.⁶³

20. CAT was concerned by the excessive use of force and of firearms by law enforcement officers.⁶⁴ CAT and the HR Committee urged Bulgaria to ensure that regulations on the use of firearms conform to international standards.⁶⁵ In 2013, Bulgaria reported to the HR Committee that the “absolute necessity” standard for the use of weapons, physical force and means of restraint by police authorities had been introduced.⁶⁶

The HR Committee requested a copy of the amendments to assess its compliance with international standards.⁶⁷ In 2014, Bulgaria provided the requested information.⁶⁸

21. CAT was concerned at the reported existence of underground investigative detention facilities in five locations where remand prisoners were held, that some cells did not have windows and that some had less than 1 m² of living space per detainee. It was also concerned by conditions of detention in many police stations where cells did not conform to international standards of hygiene and were unsustainable for overnight use. In some cases, detained persons spend the first 24 hours in an area with bars, referred to as the “cage”. CAT was concerned at reports that some detainees were handcuffed to immovable objects, such as radiators or a chair, for up to six hours. It recommended that the treatment of prisoners in investigative detention centres and detainees in police stations conform to international standards.⁶⁹

22. The HR Committee remained concerned at the overcrowding of prisons, the sanitary conditions of detention facilities, deficient medical services and the lack of trained penitentiary officers. Bulgaria should respect the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, implement its projects for the construction of new prisons and introduce non-incarceration alternatives in the penal sanction system.⁷⁰ CAT made similar observations.⁷¹

23. CAT was concerned that overcrowding and understaffing were conducive to inter-prisoner violence in detention facilities and that investigation procedures were opened for small number of cases. It was concerned about incidences of sexual violence and harassment and beatings, and about the large number of deaths in custody. CAT recommended that Bulgaria prevent inter-prisoner violence and protect prisoners from such violence, particularly lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender persons, and investigate incidents of death in custody and prosecute the persons responsible.⁷²

24. CAT was concerned that detainees continued to be held in solitary confinement for disciplinary violations and crimes. It recommended that Bulgaria prohibit the imposition of solitary confinement as punishment and implement alternative disciplinary sanctions.⁷³

25. CAT recommended that Bulgaria consider amending legislation concerning the strict regime of segregation during the first five years and handcuffing when outside their cells for prisoners serving life sentences.⁷⁴

26. CEDAW and CESCR were concerned about the high prevalence of domestic violence.⁷⁵ The HR Committee noted with regret the low number of cases of domestic violence that had been brought to justice and sanctioned.⁷⁶ CAT and the HR Committee expressed concern that allegations of domestic violence must be initiated by the victim in cases of light or average bodily harm.⁷⁷ CEDAW was concerned about article 158 of the Criminal Code, which enabled the termination of criminal proceedings against rapists when they marry their victims.⁷⁸

27. The HR Committee recommended that Bulgaria prevent domestic violence, particularly violence against women.⁷⁹ CEDAW recommended that Bulgaria ensure that sufficient State-funded shelters are available to women victims of domestic violence and their children and to provide support to non-governmental organizations offering support to the victims.⁸⁰

28. Furthermore, CEDAW urged Bulgaria to, inter alia, criminalize specifically domestic violence and marital rape and to introduce the possibility of ex officio prosecution for both offences.⁸¹ It urged Bulgaria to repeal article 158 of the Criminal Code and to ensure that all acts of sexual violence against women and girls are effectively investigated, perpetrators are prosecuted and their sentences are commensurate with the gravity of their crimes.⁸² Bulgaria reported to CEDAW that the new draft Criminal Code had been prepared in accordance with recommendations made by CEDAW and submitted to the National Assembly in January 2014.⁸³

29. CAT was concerned by the practice of early and forced marriage of Roma girls as young as 11.⁸⁴ CEDAW⁸⁵ and the HR Committee⁸⁶ expressed a similar concern. CAT urged Bulgaria to enforce the legislation concerning minimum marriage age and the prohibition of early marriages.⁸⁷

30. The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) highlighted a need to enforce the prohibition of all forms of corporal punishment.⁸⁸ CAT was concerned in particular that the use of corporal punishment was higher in institutions for children with disabilities. It recommended that Bulgaria promote non-violent methods of childrearing and education, ensure that the law prohibiting corporal punishment is enforced and provide effective and appropriate responses to corporal punishment, including investigations, prosecution and sanctioning of perpetrators.⁸⁹ The HR Committee made similar observations.⁹⁰

31. CESCR was concerned that socially vulnerable children, especially Roma children, remained engaged in harmful and exploitative labour, particularly in agriculture, industry and domestic service. It recommended that Bulgaria strengthen awareness, prevention and assistance programmes to address the problems of child labour and street children.⁹¹ The ILO Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and Recommendations (ILO Committee of Experts) requested Bulgaria to redouble its efforts to protect street children from the worst forms of child labour, and to provide for their rehabilitation and reintegration.⁹²

32. CESCR was concerned about the increase of human trafficking, despite the actions developed by the National Commission for Combating Human Trafficking and the implementation of the National Programme for Prevention and Counteraction of Human Trafficking and Protection of Victims.⁹³ CEDAW remained concerned about gaps in the implementation of legislation and strategies, the lack of preventive measures to address the root causes of trafficking and the scarcity of shelters for trafficking victims. It noted inadequate assistance and protection provided to victims and the lack of rehabilitation procedures, compensation and of funding for non-governmental organizations that provided assistance and temporary shelter to victims.⁹⁴

C. Administration of justice and the rule of law

33. While taking note of the Judiciary Reform Strategy for 2009–2013, CAT was concerned by the lack of progress in judicial reform, the lack of transparency regarding the selection and appointment of judges and members of the Supreme Judicial Council and that the principle of the independence of the judiciary was not respected by the organs outside the judiciary, nor fully applied within the judiciary.⁹⁵ In 2011, the HR Committee expressed similar concerns⁹⁶ and referred again to this issue in 2013⁹⁷ and 2014⁹⁸ in the framework of the follow-up.

34. CAT recommended that Bulgaria accelerate judicial reform.⁹⁹ The Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers indicated that, in order to make the independence of the judiciary a reality, further consideration of structural factors was required, such as clearly separating the role and function of the prosecution and investigation service from the courts.¹⁰⁰ She recommended that Bulgaria ensure access to the judicial career through periodic competitive examinations and introduce competitive processes and periodic evaluation for the promotion of judges and for filling temporary positions.¹⁰¹ Furthermore, she recommended that Bulgaria ensure a transparent process of allocation of resources to the judiciary, recognize the rights of the judiciary to participate in drafting and in deliberations on its budget in the legislature and to manage its own budget and ensure that the courts are adequately resourced.¹⁰²

35. The Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers recommended that Bulgaria ensure appropriate contact between lawyers and defendants in cases requiring State-sponsored legal aid and establishing safeguards to ensure that lawyers withdraw cases only when there is a reason that can be substantiated under applicable law.¹⁰³

36. CAT recommended that Bulgaria, inter alia, ensure that the National Bureau of Legal Aid is provided with adequate resources.¹⁰⁴ In 2012, Bulgaria reported to CAT on measures that were taken related to access to legal aid, including the amendment of the Legal Assistance Act, increased budget for legal assistance and the number of staff of the National Legal Assistance Bureau.¹⁰⁵

37. CAT was concerned about the lack of legislation ensuring non-admissibility of evidences obtained as a result of torture. It recommended that Bulgaria enact legislation specifically prohibiting the use of statements obtained under torture as evidence.¹⁰⁶

38. CAT urged Bulgaria to provide victims of torture, including those who suffered torture and ill-treatment in centres for persons with mental disabilities, with redress and fair and adequate compensation and means for rehabilitation.¹⁰⁷

39. UNICEF stated that the reform of the juvenile justice system was progressing slowly despite the adoption of the Concept for Public Policy of Justice for Children (2011) and of the road map for its implementation (2013).¹⁰⁸ The HR Committee regretted the delay in reforming the juvenile justice system and recommended that Bulgaria consider the implementation of the reform as a matter of priority.¹⁰⁹

40. UNICEF stated that children were often interrogated by officers with no specialized training, that several interrogations of children victims of violence took place during judicial processes, thus leading to the traumatization of those children, and that court hearings of child victims and witnesses were envisaged in the presence of the accused.¹¹⁰

41. The HR Committee was concerned at the allegations of persistent corruption within the justice system, the lack of convincing results in the fight against high-level corruption, and the lack of public trust in the administration of justice.¹¹¹ CAT expressed similar concerns.¹¹² The HR Committee was concerned at alleged practices of corruption within the penitentiary institutions.¹¹³

42. The Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers noted that the Specialized Criminal Court and the Appellate Specialized Criminal Court had been created to handle cases of corruption and organized crime and had become operational in 2012.¹¹⁴ She recommended that Bulgaria ensure full respect for procedural safeguards and the independence and impartiality of those courts and provide them with appropriate resources.¹¹⁵

D. Right to privacy, marriage and family life

43. The HR Committee remained concerned at the widespread practice of telephone tapping under the Special Surveillance Means Act. Bulgaria should guarantee that monitored telephone conversations are considered only as complementary evidence in criminal cases and are practised strictly in relation to court proceedings and that persons who were wrongfully monitored are informed and have access to adequate remedies.¹¹⁶

44. CEDAW recommended that effective remedies be put in place to enable women to claim and receive child support from their former husbands or partners.¹¹⁷

45. CESCR was concerned that couples in de facto unions and the status of children born as a result of those relationships were not protected by law. It recommended that Bulgaria ensure de jure equality between de facto and official unions and guarantee the full protection of the rights of children born out of wedlock.¹¹⁸

46. CESCR was concerned that same-sex couples were not legally recognized and by the absence of a legal framework for the protection of the rights of same-sex couples. It recommended that same-sex couples be recognized legally.¹¹⁹

47. UNICEF noted a reduction in the numbers of children in institutional care and an increase in the number of children entering alternative community-based family-type care or foster care.¹²⁰ CAT noted the envisaged transition from institutional to community-based care similar to a family environment and the closure of all childcare institutions within 15 years.¹²¹ However, the HR Committee remained concerned at the number of children who would remain in those institutions for the next 15 years.¹²²

48. The HR Committee urged Bulgaria to close all children's institutions and establish practical alternatives to institutionalization.¹²³ CESCR recommended that Bulgaria fully implement the reform of the residential care system for children, focusing on the integration of children who leave institutional care, and clarify the legal status of children without a family who leave institutional care and provide them with adequate family substitute and family support services.¹²⁴

E. Freedom of religion or belief and expression, and right to participate in public and political life

49. The HR Committee was concerned at the ambiguity in the Religious Denominations Act, which incorporated a specific registration procedure for the Bulgarian Orthodox Church. Bulgaria should revise the provisions of the Act to harmonize the registration procedure and modalities for all religious organizations.¹²⁵

50. The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) recommended that Bulgaria ensure that journalists and media workers are able to practice their professions in a free and safe environment and investigate all attacks on journalists and media workers.¹²⁶ It was recommended that Bulgaria decriminalize defamation.¹²⁷

51. CEDAW encouraged Bulgaria to accelerate the participation of women in public and political life and to increase the number of women in top positions, including by implementing temporary special measures. It recommended providing incentives for political parties to nominate equal numbers of women and men as candidates, adopting electoral rules that guarantee women an equal chance of being elected and creating an enabling environment for political participation of women.¹²⁸

52. The Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers recommended that Bulgaria ensure that women are able to occupy high-level positions within the judiciary and in the justice system in general.¹²⁹

F. Right to work

53. CESCR was concerned about the recent rise in unemployment and long-term unemployment rates, which negatively affected the population, especially young persons, migrants, Roma and persons with disabilities.¹³⁰ The ILO Committee of Experts noted that regional unemployment rates varied substantially, with Northern regions having an unemployment rate higher than the national average.¹³¹

54. CESCR recommended that Bulgaria amend its legislation to accord all categories of civil servants with their right to strike.¹³²

G. Right to social security and to an adequate standard of living

55. CESCR was concerned that a significant proportion of the population lived below the poverty line and about regional disparities in this regard.¹³³ CEDAW was concerned about the feminization of poverty, in particular Roma women, women with disabilities and rural and older women, and about the fact that the anti-poverty strategy did not integrate a gender perspective.¹³⁴

56. CESCR was concerned that some groups within the population, especially most disadvantaged and marginalized members, including Roma, did not have access to adequate housing. It recommended that Bulgaria implement the 2010 Act, encouraging low-cost housing construction and pursue its social housing construction programme.¹³⁵

H. Right to health

57. UNICEF stated that, despite the constitutional provisions guaranteeing all women access to free of charge obstetric care, pregnant women without health insurance were guaranteed only one medical check-up during pregnancy.¹³⁶ Practices in maternal hospitals often involved violation of the basic rights of women and children. Treatment in hospitals in some cases could inflict serious psychological harm to women and could be considered as amounting to psychological and physical violence.¹³⁷

58. CEDAW remained concerned about the increased number of early pregnancies and the high rate of abortion, particularly among teenagers and women under 20 years of age.¹³⁸ CESCR called on Bulgaria to prevent teenage pregnancies and to provide the necessary support services for pregnant adolescents, including measures to enable them to continue their education.¹³⁹

59. CEDAW recommended that Bulgaria promote education on sexual and reproductive health, targeting adolescent girls and boys, and provide adequate family planning services and affordable contraceptives, in line with the recommendations made during the UPR.¹⁴⁰

60. CESCR recommended ensuring that treatment and care is available to and accessible by persons living with HIV/AIDS and by Alzheimer patients and that the referred treatments are effectively covered by the social security scheme.¹⁴¹

I. Right to education

61. CESCR noted with concern that high dropout rates persisted, especially within disadvantaged and marginalized groups of the population.¹⁴² CEDAW reiterated its concern at the high dropout rates of Roma girls.¹⁴³

62. UNICEF noted the high percentage of children who did not receive the compulsory pre-school training owing to the limited access to pre-school education in small towns and villages and for socially vulnerable groups.¹⁴⁴

63. UNESCO encouraged Bulgaria to increase the budget allotted to education and to promote human rights education.¹⁴⁵

J. Persons with disabilities

64. In 2011, CAT was concerned by the situation of institutionalized children with mental disabilities, while noting the envisaged transition from institutional to community-based care.¹⁴⁶ In 2012, CESCR was concerned about the reduced impact of existing plans and strategies on children with disabilities who were in institutions, and about the lack of services to prepare the integration into society of persons who leave institutional care.¹⁴⁷

65. CAT was concerned at information about violent and discriminatory practices against children and adults with disabilities in medical institutions.¹⁴⁸ It was also concerned that persons with mental disabilities in institutions did not enjoy adequate legal safeguards and procedural guarantees regarding the respect of their right to mental and physical integrity, that persons deprived of their legal capacity and whose decisions and preference were not taken into account had no means to challenge the violation of their rights and that admission procedures and systems of guardianship often included officials from the institutions in which persons with disabilities were confined.¹⁴⁹ The HR Committee expressed similar concerns.¹⁵⁰ CAT¹⁵¹ and the HR Committee¹⁵² made several recommendations in this respect.

66. CESCR was concerned at reports that children with disabilities continued to be victims of segregation in the school system.¹⁵³ UNICEF recommended that Bulgaria continue its efforts to include children with disabilities in the general school system and reduce the number of schools for children with special educational needs.¹⁵⁴

K. Minorities

67. While taking note of the recognition of “ethnic diversity” in the Constitution, CESCR was concerned about the lack of official recognition of national minorities.¹⁵⁵ The Independent Expert on minority issues stated that the Government denied the existence of an ethnic Macedonian minority, and did not recognize the Pomaks as a distinct minority – claiming that both groups were ethnic Bulgarians. The Government should ensure and protect the right to ethnic self-identification.¹⁵⁶ Bulgaria commented that it adhered strictly to the principle that ethnic identity was a matter of free personal choice.¹⁵⁷

68. The Independent Expert on minority issues stated that high levels of unemployment, poor access to labour markets and low levels of skills and training represented significant contributing factors to the cycle of social exclusion and poverty experienced by many Roma. The majority of the Roma who were employed worked in low-skilled, low-wage and low-status jobs.¹⁵⁸ She stated that a new holistic approach to Roma integration, designed and implemented in full consultation with Roma organizations, was required to break the vicious circle of social exclusion and poverty.¹⁵⁹

69. The Independent Expert on minority issues noted inadequate living conditions of Roma and that Roma communities remained de facto segregated and largely neglected, including in terms of efforts to improve infrastructure and the provision of services, water and sanitation.¹⁶⁰ CESCR and the HR Committee were concerned about the numerous forced evictions affecting Roma.¹⁶¹ UNICEF noted that those evictions were carried out without the provision of an alternative accommodation.¹⁶² The HR Committee urged Bulgaria to strictly limit the use of forced evictions through the adoption of all feasible alternatives to eviction and to guarantee alternative housing for affected families.¹⁶³

70. CESCR was concerned at reports that Roma children continued to be victims of segregation in the school system.¹⁶⁴ The Independent Expert on minority issues stated that the vast majority of Roma children remained in substandard de facto segregated schools in Roma neighbourhoods that remained a significant barrier to improving the educational outcomes of Roma children. Enrolment levels of Roma children were much lower than the average at all levels of education.¹⁶⁵ CEDAW urged Bulgaria to fully implement the strategy for educational integration of children and students from ethnic minorities and the National Roma Integration Strategy (2012-2020).¹⁶⁶

71. The Independent Expert on minority issues stated that the Government's position not to allow the use of mother tongue languages as the language of instruction in schools, particularly in regions where minorities were a majority or constituted a large percentage of the population, was a concern for minorities, including the Roma, Turkish and Macedonians. She urged the Government to consider introducing bilingual education.¹⁶⁷

L. Migrants, refugees and asylum seekers

72. CEDAW recommended that Bulgaria consider gender persecution as a ground for recognition of refugee status.¹⁶⁸ UNHCR made a similar recommendation.¹⁶⁹

73. UNHCR stated that challenges relating to the timely transfer of asylum seekers to State Agency for Refugees had multiplied in mid-2013 with the increase of arrivals and the lack of reception and processing capacity of the Refugee Status Determination procedure. It noted the construction of a 33-km fence along the border. UNHCR stated that those measures could have resulted in violation of Bulgaria's international obligations towards refugees and the principle of non-refoulement. It was concerned about reports that individuals who might be in need of international protection had been prevented from reaching or entering the territory of Bulgaria.¹⁷⁰

74. UNHCR recommended that Bulgaria ensure full respect of the principle of non-refoulement and facilitate access of persons in need of international protection to fair and efficient asylum procedures.¹⁷¹ CAT recommended that Bulgaria amend its legislation to guarantee a suspensive in-country right of appeal and respect for all safeguards and interim measures with regard to asylum and deportation procedures pending the outcome of the appeals.¹⁷²

75. CAT recommended that Bulgaria amend legislation to remove the rule allowing for the detention of asylum seekers on the basis of illegal entry and that the detention of asylum seekers is only used as a last resort.¹⁷³

76. UNHCR stated that unaccompanied children were not appointed a guardian but instead represented during the Refugee Status Determination procedure by a social worker who was not legally authorized to represent the child in matters of daily life.¹⁷⁴ UNICEF made a similar observation. It noted the absence of adequate solution for the accommodation of the unaccompanied minors and of mechanism for family reunification.¹⁷⁵

77. UNHCR stated that, although asylum seeking and refugee children were legally entitled to access to education, access was limited in practice owing to the requirement of passing exams in Bulgarian. It recommended that Bulgaria respond to the practical absence of access to formal primary education for asylum seeking children.¹⁷⁶

78. UNICEF reported that recreational activities for children in the reception centres were sporadic, mainly organized by volunteers and that language classes were organized by UNHCR.¹⁷⁷

79. CESCR was concerned that asylum seekers were not allowed to work during their first year in Bulgaria and only had access to the monthly allowance in application with the Social Assistance Act. It recommended that Bulgaria amend its legislation, allowing asylum seekers to obtain a work permit within the year of their arrival and reinforce its National

Programme for the Integration of Refugees, providing special attention to vulnerable persons.¹⁷⁸

80. UNHCR recommended that Bulgaria facilitate the effective integration of beneficiaries of international protection with the view to achieving the full realization of all basic socioeconomic rights and provide intensive and quality Bulgarian language courses to facilitate the naturalization of beneficiaries of international protection.¹⁷⁹

81. UNHCR and CAT recommended that Bulgaria incorporate the definition of a stateless person in its legislation in line with the Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons and establish a statelessness determination procedure to ensure stateless persons enjoy their basic human rights.¹⁸⁰
