Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its twenty-fifth session from 2 to 13 May 2016. The review of Ireland was held at the 18th meeting on 11 May 2016. The delegation of Ireland was headed by Tánaiste and Minister of Justice and Equality, Frances Fitzgerald. At its 20th meeting, held on 13 May 2016, the Working Group adopted the report on Ireland.

2. On 12 January 2016, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Ireland: Ghana, Republic of Korea and Slovenia.

3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Ireland:

(a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/25/IRL/1);

(b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/25/IRL/2);

(c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/25/IRL/3).

4. A list of questions prepared in advance by the Czech Republic, Germany, Liechtenstein, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was transmitted to Ireland through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation stated that Ireland attached great importance to human rights and the universal periodic review. Significant domestic developments had taken place since the first cycle. Ireland had challenges to address and was committed to improving its human rights protection. The delegation stressed the importance of, and the significant contribution made by, a strong and independent community and voluntary sector, and praised the engagement of civil society organizations and the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission.

6. The delegation outlined the socioeconomic context for the policy choices of the previous five years. The social welfare system had protected the most vulnerable from the worst impact of the financial crisis.

7. Key recent human rights developments had included the adoption by referendum of a Constitutional amendment to provide for same-sex marriage. Ireland was at the forefront of introducing self-determined gender recognition under the Gender Recognition Act 2015, which allowed adults to determine their own gender without recourse to medical or psychological opinion, and provided for a person's preferred gender to be fully recognized by the State.

8. Ireland had amended its Constitution to strengthen the rights of children, including the principle that the rights of the child were the paramount consideration in relevant proceedings. The Children and Family Relationships Act 2015 had established new legal architecture for children and set the rights of the child as the court's paramount consideration in family law cases.

9. The Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission's structural independence and the strength of its mandate had been recognized internationally and it had been accorded "A" status. Its founding Act placed a positive duty on public bodies to have due regard in their work for human rights and equality and to conduct their business in a manner consistent with individual human rights.

10. Ireland had sought the views of members of the public and civil society in preparing for the review. It was the first European Union member State to have published a national strategy on children and young people's participation in decision-making, following a child-led consultation with 8 to 17 year olds.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

11. During the interactive dialogue, 93 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

12. The Holy See appreciated the new strategies against domestic violence and on children and persons with disabilities, and the establishment of the Irish Refugee Protection Programme.

13. Honduras welcomed the efforts of Ireland to implement the recommendations received during the first review cycle.

14. Hungary commended Ireland for its commitment to protecting human rights defenders. Hungary regretted that Ireland had not yet ratified the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities or established the national preventive mechanism required under the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, in line with previously accepted recommendations.

15. India welcomed the establishment of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission and the Workplace Relations Commission, the adoption of the Equality Act and recent measures to enhance the rights of the child. India encouraged Ireland to address the forced removal of Roma children from their families and their placement in State care. India was concerned at the disproportionately high level of unemployment among Travellers, Roma, young people and persons with disabilities.

16. The Philippines commended the establishment of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission and the adoption of the Equality Act. It encouraged Ireland to ensure migrants' access to the labour market and social security, to address allegations of ill-treatment of older persons and persons with disabilities in residential care, and to consider alternatives to institutionalization.

17. The Islamic Republic of Iran was concerned at racial discrimination against, and intolerance and profiling of Muslims and people of African origin. It shared the concerns of the Committee on the Rights of the Child regarding the state of health of children in single-parent families, children living in poverty and Traveller and Roma children.

18. Iraq welcomed the adoption of legislation enabling ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the establishment of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission, which would assist public bodies in performing their duties.

19. Israel was deeply concerned about hate crimes, unnecessary surgery on intersex children, and persistent discrimination against lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex children. Israel was worried about reports of non-consensual use of psychiatric medication, electroshocks and other coercive practices in mental health services.
20. Kenya noted the efforts of Ireland to combat racism and increase international development aid, and its active engagement in establishing the Sustainable Development Goals.
21. Kyrgyzstan commended Ireland for adopting its second national strategy on domestic, sexual and gender-based violence and the Equality Act, and for acceding to several international human rights instruments.
22. Latvia noted efforts to reduce the risk of human trafficking through sham marriages, and the adoption of the Children First Act and a national strategy on children's and young people's participation in decision-making.
23. Lebanon praised Ireland for having implemented many recommendations from the first review, including by amending anti-discrimination laws and achieving equality.
24. Libya commended Ireland for reforming the law enforcement sector and establishing the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission.
25. Lithuania commended Ireland for adopting a national suicide prevention strategy and encouraged its full implementation. Lithuania welcomed the adoption of the second national strategy on domestic, sexual and gender-based violence.
26. Malaysia noted new legislation, reform and strategies on policing operations, protecting children, combating racism, and disability inclusion, while noting the need to give further attention to the rights of women, children and persons with disabilities.
27. Maldives commended Ireland for adopting the Equality Act 2015, developing a national plan against trafficking and extending the Early Childhood Care Education programme.
28. Mexico congratulated Ireland for its commitment to the universal periodic review and for its progress in developing initiatives on migration. It urged Ireland to consolidate and implement the initiatives promptly.
29. Montenegro welcomed the strategy on domestic violence and the plan to ratify the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence. Montenegro asked about the consultation process launched on the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and about the initial results of the work of the police authorities' Child Protection and Human Exploitation Unit.
30. Morocco noted the commitment of Ireland to combating racism in all its forms, including against migrants. It welcomed the establishment of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission and the Inter-Departmental Committee on Human Rights, and the consultations on ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture.
31. Mozambique welcomed the draft national action plan to prevent and combat human trafficking and the inspirational national strategy on children and young people's participation in decision-making.
32. Namibia welcomed the national consultations on the review process, especially among children and young people, and the adoption of the Equality Act 2015 and the strategy against domestic violence.
33. The Netherlands congratulated Ireland on its referendum amending the Constitution to allow same-sex marriage. It encouraged further action on ratifying the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and on removing all constitutional obstacles restricting access to abortions.

34. New Zealand commended progress on gender equality and the Constitutional amendment allowing same-sex marriage, while noting the need for further work on the sexual and reproductive health policy for adolescents.

35. Norway appreciated the continued involvement of civil society in the review process. Norway remained concerned about the restrictive circumstances under which an abortion could be carried out in Ireland and about prison conditions.

36. Pakistan commended Ireland for its adoption of the National Disability Inclusion Strategy, its establishment of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission and the Court of Appeal and its cooperation with human rights mechanisms.

37. Panama welcomed the efforts of Ireland to protect human rights, especially the strategies on domestic, sexual and gender-based violence and on children and young people's participation in decision-making, and the establishment of the Child Protection and Human Exploitation Unit and the Court of Appeal.

38. Paraguay highlighted the effective application of legislation in Ireland and hoped that remaining problems could be overcome with successive legal reforms.

39. Indonesia welcomed the establishment of the Inter-Departmental Committee on Human Rights to assist in the ratification of key international human rights treaties and the commitment to further promote women's rights.

40. Poland welcomed the establishment of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission.

41. Portugal welcomed the establishment of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission. Portugal was concerned that families affected by homelessness reportedly faced delays in accessing social housing.

42. Qatar was concerned at violence against women and girls and that asylum seekers faced long waiting periods and poor living conditions in reception centres. It reminded Ireland of its pledge to ratify the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

43. The delegation of Ireland reported that ratifying the Amendment to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court on the crime of aggression was an important objective. The Government was committed to promoting freedom of expression on and offline, and was actively highlighting the issue of climate change in human rights discussions.

44. The Irish Refugee Protection Programme was a response to the migration crisis in Southern Europe. Over two years, Ireland would take up to 4,000 individuals, including 520 programme refugees from Lebanon under the refugee resettlement programme. To date, 263 people had been accepted and the remainder were expected by the end of 2016.

45. The new Government had reaffirmed its commitment to resolving the housing shortage and homelessness crisis by appointing a Cabinet Minister for housing issues, and was committed to putting housing on a sustainable footing. The delegation stated that every household in Ireland would have access to secure, good quality housing suited to its needs at an affordable price in a sustainable community. It had set a target of an increase in output to the 25,000 homes required annually and measures had been introduced accordingly.

46. The rental market in Ireland had doubled between 2006 and 2011. Measures were being introduced to bring much-needed stability to the rental sector.

47. The Social Housing Strategy 2020 aimed to increase the supply of social housing by 110,000 by 2020. Some €3 billion in capital funding would be provided to that end.

48. The Republic of Korea commended the enhancement of women's political participation through establishing quotas for the general election, and the establishment of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission.
49. The Republic of Moldova encouraged Ireland to expedite ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and to establish a national preventive mechanism. It inquired about the anti-trafficking plan.
50. Romania noted the steps taken by Ireland to ensure respect for the human rights of persons affected by the economic and financial crisis.
51. The Russian Federation made recommendations.
52. Saudi Arabia regretted the absence of legislation to ratify the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and was concerned at racist manifestations, the lack of a strong monitoring mechanism, the gender wage gap and religious discrimination policies in schools.
53. Senegal noted the ratification of the International Labour Organization (ILO) Domestic Workers Convention, 2011 (No. 189) and welcomed the Comprehensive Employment Strategy for People with Disabilities.
54. Sierra Leone commended Ireland for highlighting the importance of civil society, and for the strategy on domestic, sexual and gender-based violence, the domestic violence bill and the national action plan to prevent and combat human trafficking.
55. Singapore welcomed initiatives to meet housing needs such as the Social Housing Strategy 2020 and the integrated housing package. Singapore commended Ireland for its Comprehensive Employment Strategy for People with Disabilities and looked forward to the early ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.
56. Slovakia welcomed the establishment of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission and the Child and Family Agency, and the adoption of the Children First Act. Slovakia encouraged Ireland to ensure effective access to abortion.
57. The United States of America commended Ireland for co-facilitating the United Nations high-level plenary meeting on addressing large movements of refugees and migrants and for its work on the Sustainable Development Goals. It was concerned at discrimination against Traveller and Roma communities and at religious preference in admissions to publicly funded schools under religious patronage. It noted negative developments in women's reproductive health.
58. South Africa commended Ireland for submitting a voluntary interim report and enacting legislation ensuring that same-sex couples could marry. It urged Ireland to reinstate the age of 14 years as the age of criminal responsibility, as was established in the 2001 Children Act.
59. Spain congratulated Ireland for its national and international commitment to human rights and for the recent adoption of the law on same-sex marriage.
60. Sri Lanka welcomed the establishment of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission, the constitutional recognition of children as rights holders and efforts to reduce unemployment and poverty.
61. The State of Palestine welcomed progress in addressing the needs of persons with disabilities, towards ratifying the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, and regarding business and human rights, including publication of the working outline of the national action plan thereon.
62. The Sudan welcomed the comprehensive presentation of the national report.

63. Sweden welcomed the delegation.
64. Switzerland underlined that its accepted recommendation to ratify the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture had yet to be implemented, and noted that the legal framework on abortion remained restrictive despite the Protection of Life During Pregnancy Act 2013.
65. Thailand congratulated Ireland on its ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on a communications procedure and the second National Action Plan on Women, Peace and Security. It encouraged Ireland to adopt a national human rights action plan. It was concerned at the high incidence of violence against women and children.
66. The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia commended Ireland for its support for civil society organizations and its establishment of the Inter-Departmental Committee on Human Rights, and requested an update on ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture.
67. Timor-Leste welcomed the adoption of the Children (Amendment) Act 2015, repealing detention of children in adult prison facilities, and the strengthening of inpatient child and adolescent mental health services.
68. Togo welcomed the development of the strategy on domestic, sexual and gender-based violence, containing an action plan for ratifying the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence.
69. Turkey noted the economic difficulties of Ireland and welcomed the recent measures that had boosted public resources and improved housing, social security and health care. It noted steps to encourage co-education, diversity and tolerance of other faiths and the commitment to ratify the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.
70. Ukraine welcomed the establishment of consultations with young people, the Court of Appeal, the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission and the second national strategy on domestic, sexual and gender-based violence.
71. The United Arab Emirates welcomed the establishment of the Child and Family Agency and the Child Protection and Human Exploitation Unit, and the adoption of the Children First Act.
72. The United Kingdom welcomed the decision to extend marriage rights to same-sex couples and the constitutional amendment strengthening children's rights. It encouraged Ireland to ratify the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture.
73. Slovenia welcomed the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on a communications procedure and the Convention on Access to Information, Public Participation in Decision-Making and Access to Justice in Environmental Matters, and the adoption of legislation on same-sex marriage. It noted persistent challenges regarding freedom of religion or belief in the education system and on access to abortion. It regretted that its previously accepted recommendations on ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography had not been implemented.
74. Uruguay welcomed the constitutional and legal measures Ireland had adopted against discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity, and the establishment of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission. Uruguay noted that the treaty bodies had underlined the restrictiveness of legislation on abortion.

75. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela noted the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on a communications procedure. It welcomed the policies aimed at promoting the equality and integration of Roma and Travellers and praised the Irish Refugee Protection Programme.
76. Algeria welcomed the adoption of the Children Act in 2015, but was concerned at the increase in food insecurity and malnutrition, about the impact of austerity measures on health care, education and social security, and about gender inequality.
77. Andorra welcomed measures aimed at combating domestic, sexual and gender-based violence through, inter alia, the adoption of the second national strategy thereon. It appreciated the 2015 draft criminal law protecting children against sexual abuse.
78. Argentina commended Ireland for establishing the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission and acknowledged its progress in combating discrimination.
79. Armenia welcomed the establishment of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission, the Court of Appeal and the police reform programme.
80. The delegation of Ireland explained that most children were educated in publicly funded schools. It was reported that principles of equality were set out in the relevant enactments and schools' enrolment policies had to be applied fairly to all applicants.
81. The patronage divestment process created a greater choice of primary schools in areas where there was insufficient demographic need for new school provision. In areas with population growth, the process for establishing new schools took account of parental preferences. Since 2011, 42 new schools had opened, 39 of which had a multi-denominational ethos. The new Programme for Government included a commitment that the Government would aim to have 400 multi-denominational or non-denominational schools by 2030. The Education (Admission to Schools) Bill contained important changes to make enrolment policies fairer and more transparent.
82. The National Plan for Equity of Access to Higher Education 2015-2019 aimed to assist underrepresented groups, including members of the Traveller community, to participate in tertiary education.
83. Since its last review, Ireland had introduced child protection legislation, including legislation to ensure that criminal convictions or other information giving rise to concern about someone working with or seeking to work with children was disclosed appropriately. It was mandatory for persons working with children or vulnerable adults to be vetted. The defence of reasonable chastisement in relation to corporal punishment had been abolished.
84. The Child and Family Agency had funding of €676 million in 2016 and brought a dedicated focus to child protection, family support and other key children's services. It was responsible for a range of services.
85. Australia welcomed the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission and its first strategy statement. Australia commended Ireland for its engagement with civil society, holding a referendum on children's rights and progress in improving prison conditions.
86. Azerbaijan was concerned about intolerance and discrimination against non-citizens, ill-treatment and harassment of minorities and incitement to violence and hate speech against them, anti-Semitic and Islamophobic manifestations, prison conditions and domestic and sexual violence against women.
87. Bahrain was concerned about the prevalence of domestic and sexual violence against women, which remained serious, and women's underrepresentation in the public and private sectors.

88. Bangladesh acknowledged the primacy of the best interests of the child, the commitment to combating racism and the proposed integration strategy to include an anti-racism component. Bangladesh echoed the treaty bodies' concerns about gender inequality, the situation of the Roma and discriminatory admission policies in schools.
89. Belarus noted the legal and administrative measures Ireland had taken to implement recommendations from the first review and welcomed the efforts to combat trafficking in persons.
90. The Plurinational State of Bolivia noted the progress made by Ireland since its first review and its positive approach to its second review.
91. Bosnia and Herzegovina praised Ireland for its support for human rights education and encouraged ratification of the Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and enquired about ending children's detention in adult prisons.
92. Botswana commended Ireland for strongly advocating against reprisals, protecting human rights defenders, promoting civil society space and combating domestic violence.
93. Bulgaria commended Ireland for adopting a strategy on children and young people's participation in decision-making and for establishing the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission and the Workplace Relations Commission. It encouraged the continued review of national legislation on access to abortion.
94. Greece commended Ireland for establishing the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission, adopting the Children (Amendment) Act 2015 and protecting human rights defenders.
95. Chad welcomed legal developments in equality and non-discrimination, sexual and domestic violence, trafficking in persons and abortion, and measures on access to justice, police reform and criminal justice.
96. Chile praised Ireland for establishing the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission and adopting the Marriage Act 2015 and the Equality (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 2015.
97. China noted the efforts of Ireland to combat domestic and gender-based violence and human trafficking, and to promote gender equality. It was concerned about prison overcrowding, acts of racism and hate crimes, and poor conditions for asylum seekers.
98. Croatia welcomed the new strategy on and the awareness-raising campaigns to stop domestic, gender-based and sexual violence.
99. Cuba commended Ireland for progress in children's participation in decision-making, in universal health care and in education. It noted the treaty bodies' concerns regarding gender inequality, the effects of public spending cuts on the most vulnerable in society and the Protection of Life during Pregnancy Act.
100. Cyprus welcomed the legal measures taken to entrench children's rights in the Constitution and enhance their protection under criminal law, and the establishment of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission.
101. The Czech Republic appreciated the comprehensive presentation and the responses provided to some advance questions.
102. Denmark welcomed the Constitutional changes ensuring the right to marry for same-sex couples, and the improved prison conditions, although overcrowding issues remained. It was concerned at the criminalization of abortion and the burdensome requirements for access to abortion.

103. Egypt welcomed the draft action plan on combating human trafficking, the criminal law bill and strengthened measures for juvenile and youth justice. It was concerned at the negative impact of austerity measures, pervasive gender inequality and domestic and sexual violence, discriminatory school admission policies, structural discrimination against Travellers and Roma, and racial crimes and incitement to racial and religious hatred.
104. Finland appreciated the open, broad consultations with civil society and encouraged continued efforts to promote the protection of economic, social and cultural rights.
105. France welcomed the efforts of Ireland since its first review.
106. Georgia highlighted the establishment of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission and encouraged the continued submission of a midterm implementation report. Georgia was concerned that Ireland had not ratified some important human rights instruments.
107. Germany welcomed the lively public discourse on ongoing challenges and the active participation of civil society in the review process.
108. Ghana commended the establishment of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission and the integration of human rights standards, including respect for equality and non-discrimination in public institutions. Ghana appreciated initiatives on children's access to health care.
109. Canada commended the implementation of marriage equality and encouraged timely legislative reforms for the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.
110. Guatemala acknowledged the commitment of Ireland to promoting and protecting human rights and its adoption of the International Protection Act 2015.
111. Haiti noted progress in the areas of children's rights, access to justice, national minimum wage, universal health coverage and combating domestic violence.
112. Italy noted the efforts of Ireland to strengthen children's participation in decision-making and to protect children, women's rights and women from violence.
113. Iceland highlighted the referendum approving marriage equality, but regretted the highly restrictive circumstances under which women could lawfully have an abortion in Ireland and the criminalization of abortion in cases of rape, incest and threat to a woman's health.
114. Brazil commended legislation ensuring same-sex marriage and ongoing measures to ratify the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture. Brazil encouraged Ireland to consider developing programmes to address housing needs, especially those of persons in vulnerable situations and persons affected by poverty.
115. For Ireland, the universal periodic review was a practical expression of the fact that human rights were not solely of domestic concern, but a legitimate and important concern for the international community. Ireland was committed to ongoing improvement in the protection and promotion of human rights and was convinced that everyone could learn and benefit from dialogue with other States.
116. Ireland was engaged in a consultative process to identify institutional mechanisms for the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and would ratify it as soon as they were agreed and the necessary legislation had been enacted. Significant improvements had been made to prison accommodation and the practice of "slopping out" in prisons was being brought to an end.

117. Ireland stated that it was now a country of significant inward migration and many migrants had chosen to become Irish citizens. Recently, citizenship ceremonies had been introduced, providing an important symbolic opportunity for the Irish State to welcome new citizens and celebrate their membership of the nation.

118. Significant progress had been made in advancing the rights of people with capacity difficulties. The Assisted Decision-Making (Capacity) Act 2015 was a comprehensive reform of the law governing people with capacity difficulties.

119. In Ireland, termination of pregnancy was regulated by constitutional and statute law. The first referendum on the subject, held in 1983, had introduced a new section in article 40 (3) of the Constitution which guaranteed the right to life of the unborn. A second referendum was held in 1992. The electorate was asked to vote on three proposed amendments to the Constitution. The twelfth amendment, which was designed to exclude the risk of suicide as a ground for lawful abortion, was defeated. However, the right to travel and the right to information were accepted. A third referendum on abortion was held in 2002 to remove the threat of suicide as a ground for a lawful abortion and thereby restrict the grounds recognized in the Attorney General v. X case. The proposal was defeated.

120. The Protection of Life During Pregnancy Act 2013 regulated access to lawful termination of pregnancy in accordance with the X case and the judgment of the European Court of Human Rights in the case of A, B and C v. Ireland. The Act established procedures firstly, to ensure that, where lawful termination of pregnancy was under consideration, the right to life of the unborn child was respected where practicable, and secondly to ensure that a woman could ascertain by means of a clear process whether she was entitled to the medical treatment to which the Act applied.

121. The Programme for Government had committed to establish a citizen's assembly on the abortion laws, which would make recommendations on further constitutional changes and the eighth amendment would be considered as part of that work.

122. The National Sexual Health Strategy set out the direction that the Department of Health and the stakeholders, including those who used the services, wished to take over the next five years.

123. The Constitutional Convention had considered the incorporation of economic, social and cultural rights into the Constitution and had recommended that, in principle, the Constitution should be amended to strengthen the protection of those rights. The recommendation would be referred to the Oireachtas Committee on Housing and Homelessness for consideration. The Government had accepted the Constitutional Convention's recommendation to remove the offence of blasphemy from the Constitution.

124. The Constitutional Convention had made recommendations on article 41 (2) of the Constitution, which referred to women in the home. The recommendations had been examined by a task force and its report would inform the new Government in its consideration of the issue.

125. In 2016, Ireland would introduce two weeks of paid paternity leave.

126. In 2012, the gender pay gap had been 14.4 per cent compared with a European Union average of 16.5 per cent. The employment rate for men in 2014 had been 73 per cent, up from 68 per cent in 2012. The female employment rate had shown a more modest but significant increase, from 59.4 per cent in 2012 to 61.2 per cent in 2013. The gender gap in employment rates had almost halved from 16 per cent in 2008 to 9 per cent in 2012, but had widened slightly since then as male employment had begun to recover relatively rapidly. The introduction of a national minimum wage had led to an improvement in relation to the gender pay gap.

127. Work was ongoing to foster the advancement of women into decision-making roles and positive action measures aimed at improving their employment opportunities and economic position. A consultation process on establishing a national women's strategy would commence in 2016, including wide-ranging consultation with civil society.

128. A new Traveller and Roma inclusion strategy was being established. A comprehensive, three-phase consultation process was under way. Phase 1 identified key themes for the new strategy, and phase 2 identified and agreed high-level objectives under each agreed theme. The final phase would identify detailed actions to achieve each agreed objective, with timescales, institutional responsibilities and monitoring arrangements.

129. Ireland had a small Roma population, comprising recent migrants mainly from other European Union member States and their Irish-born children. They had the same rights as all other European Union citizens and were fully protected by equality legislation. A Roma consultative committee, on which members of the Roma community would be represented, was being established to ensure that their voices and issues were heard at the centre of Government.

130. A Minister of State for Disabilities had been appointed with a seat at the Cabinet table and a mandate to ensure greater coherence in service delivery and a real improvement in the situation of people with disabilities. A new disability inclusion strategy was being developed on the basis of a comprehensive consultation process, and should be in place in 2016.

131. Ireland was committed to ratifying the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. It was anticipated that the necessary legislation would be published soon and would be enacted to allow for ratification by the end of 2016. Ireland would ratify the Optional Protocol to the Convention at the same time.

132. Legislation would be introduced to remove the current exemption allowing for underage marriage.

133. There was no lack of legal certainty in relation to surnames for any children in Ireland.

134. Ireland thanked delegations for their comments and recommendations and committed to submitting a voluntary interim report in 2018 or 2019.

II. Conclusions and/or recommendations
