ADVISORY PANEL ON COUNTRY INFORMATION

- vii The independent Advisory Panel on Country Information (APCI) was established in 2003 to make recommendations to the Home Secretary about the content of the UKBA's country of origin information material. The APCI welcomes all feedback on the UKBA's COI Key Documents, COI Reports and other country of origin information material. Information about the Panel's work can be found on its website at www.apci.org.uk
- viii In the course of its work, the APCI reviews the content of selected UKBA COI documents and makes recommendations specific to those documents and of a more general nature. The APCI may or may not have reviewed this particular document. At the following link is a list of the COI Key Documents, COI Reports and other documents which have, to date, been reviewed by the APCI: www.apci.org.uk/reviewed-documents.html

- ix Please note: It is not the function of the APCI to endorse any UKBA material or procedures. Some of the material examined by the Panel relates to countries designated or proposed for designation for the Non-Suspensive Appeals (NSA) list. In such cases, the Panel's work should not be taken to imply any endorsement of the decision or proposal to designate a particular country for NSA, nor of the NSA process itself.

RECENT HISTORY

"In response to their loss of autonomy, and their expulsion from employment, education and the healthcare system, the Kosovo Albanians began a campaign of peaceful resistance, setting up parallel institutions mirroring those imposed on them by Belgrade. In 1991, in a referendum organised by the parallel institutions, they voted overwhelmingly for independence. In 1992, secret elections led to the appointment of Ibrahim Rugova as Kosovo President. His party, the Democratic League of Kosovo (LDK), which dominated the underground parliament, declared independence on 28 May 1992.

“The Kosovo Albanians anticipated that the international community would settle Kosovo's status along with the end of the war in Bosnia. But the Dayton Accords, which ended the war in 1995, did not touch on Kosovo. The frustration of the Kosovo Albanians led to the formation of the Kosovo Liberation Army (KLA) which began a low-level campaign of shootings and murder against Serbian security forces. During 1998 the conflict escalated. Serbian forces began a program of systematic reprisals and village clearances against the Kosovo Albanians. 250,000 fled their homes.” (FCO Country profile, Kosovo, last reviewed 21 February 2008) [3a]

The situation in Kosovo deteriorated during 1998 and 1999 until:

“In the face of growing human rights abuses, NATO had no choice but to act to prevent a humanitarian crisis. NATO air strikes on Kosovo and Serbia began on 24 March 1999 and continued until 9 June 1999. Following NATO's intervention, the Serb armed forces massively intensified a policy of ethnic cleansing, driving over 850,000 Kosovo Albanians out of Kosovo and into neighbouring countries. On 10 June, Milošević agreed to withdraw Serb troops from Kosovo, leaving the way open for international peacekeepers and allowing those who had fled to return to their homes.

Following the conflict, the UN adopted Security Council resolution 1244, which authorised the establishment of the UN Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) and deployment of a NATO-led security force (KFOR). It placed Kosovo under transitional UN administration while remaining technically part of Serbia pending the outcome of a political process to resolve its final status.” (FCO Country profile, Kosovo, last reviewed 21 February 2008) [3a]

RECENT EVENTS AND POLITICAL DEVELOPMENTS

The recent past: 2000-2007

The FCO regional profile of Kosovo has a detailed account of the process towards a resolution of status, from the 2005 meeting of the UN Security Council and the Contact Group, through to the formulation of the Ahtisaari Plan, and the breakdown of two years' contact talks with the Serbian Government regarding Kosovo's imminent independence. (FCO Country profile, Kosovo, last reviewed 21 February 2008) [3a]

A key event in the period of UNMIK administration was the March 2004 riots in which 19 people were killed in clashes between ethnic Albanians and ethnic Serbs. A major flashpoint was in the ethnically-divided city of Mitrovicë. (BBC News timeline, 17 February 2008) [6b]

Independence

Independence was declared by the Kosovan Assembly on Sunday 17 February 2008. (BBC News, 17 February 2008) [6i] Previously, on 15 February, the International Crisis Group noted a Balkan Insight report that stated, “Kosovo's declaration of independence, expected in the coming days, has chances to pass peacefully. The signs are encouraging from both Kosovo's Albanian majority and the Serbian government.” (BBC News, 15 February 2008) [13b] In the event, there was only one incident of violence in Kosovo, when a hand-grenade was thrown at a government building resulting in superficial damage; and there were violent protests in Belgrade, the capital of Serbia over the weekend of the 16 / 17 February 2008. [6f]

On 19 February 2008, two border points on the northern Kosovo / south Serbia border, at Jarnije and Banja, were attacked by gangs of Kosovan Serbs, and destroyed. The Kosovo Protection Force (KPS) officers stationed there were rescued by French KFOR (UN Kosovo Force) troops, and remained in protection at the French KFOR base in Mitrovica. As of 20 February 2008, the border with Serbia has been closed by the UN. (BBC News, 20 February 2008) [6j] The Serbian state-run railway company announced on 3 March 2008 that it was reclaiming the 50km Lesak-Zvečan railway in northern Kosovo; and that 150 Serb KPS policemen were in dispute with KPS headquarters. (BBC News, 3 March 2008) [6i]

On 18 March 2008, BBC News reported that a Ukrainian UNMIK policeman died after sustaining injuries on 17 March 2008, as UN forces attempted to evict Serb protestors who had previously occupied a courthouse in Mitrovicë, after a series of protests. (BBC News, 18 March 2008) [6k]

There was a souring of international relations. The United States recognised Kosovo as an independent state; most EU states individually acknowledged Kosovo, but an agreed EU statement had, as at 18 February, yet to emerge. Russia backed Serbia, roundly condemning the declaration of independence, and used the issue to round on former Soviet states with which it has ongoing disagreements. (BBC News, 20 February 2008) [6j]

Authorities in Kosovo

In the slow move to independence, power will move from the United Nations Mission In Kosovo (UNMIK) to Kosovan Government institutions that have been operational as Provisional Institutions of Self-Government (PISGs). (USSD report for 2007) [2a] (Kosovo, introduction)

UNMIK has been and is the executive power in Kosovo, until independence is assured: "UNMIK promulgated regulations that addressed the civil and legal responsibilities of governmental entities and private individuals and ratified laws passed by the Kosovo Assembly". (USSD report for 2007) [2a] (Kosovo, introduction)

Amnesty International (AI) noted on 17 February 2008 that Kosovo had declared independence, and mentioned the Ahtisaari Plan, the UN plan for "supervised independence". The press release summarises "The plan proposed jurisdiction by the Kosovo authorities over legislative, executive and judicial functions, a European Security and Defence Policy mission responsible for international judiciary and prosecutors, an international police force and continued military presence, with an International Civilian Representative charged to ensure implementation of the plan." [10a] The European Union will also provide advisors to the institutions of the fledgling state (the Athasaari plan). (Amnesty International, 17 February 2008) [10a]

HUMAN RIGHTS

“UNMIK and the PISG generally respected the human rights of residents; however, there were problems in some areas, particularly relating to minority populations. The most serious of these were cases of politically and ethnically motivated violence; injuries from unexploded ordnance or landmines; lengthy pretrial detention and lack of judicial due process; corruption and government interference in the judiciary; societal antipathy against Serbs and the Serbian Orthodox Church; lack of progress in returning internally displaced persons to their homes; corruption in the PISG; violence and discrimination against women; trafficking in persons, particularly girls and women for sexual exploitation; societal violence, abuse, and discrimination against minority communities; societal discrimination against persons with disabilities; abuse and discrimination against homosexuals; and child labor in the informal sector.” (USSD report for 2007) [2a] (Kosovo, introduction)

AI has highlighted its concerns about Kosovo’s current administration, particularly a perceived failure of UNMIK to tackle crimes committed during the 1999 war (AI, 30 January 2008) [10c], and called for the Kosovan Government to fully consult all of the population in drawing up a new Constitution. (AI, 13 February 2008) [10d] Likewise, Human Rights Watch produced a report, “Build new state on rule of law”, on 15 February 2008, that also highlighted ongoing human rights concerns. [4a]

Ethnic Minorities

The BBC reported on 15 February 2008 that “Kosovo's Prime Minister Hashim Thaçi has vowed to protect the rights of all minorities as the province prepares to declare independence from Serbia.” [6f] CNN added “Thaçi said he was establishing a new government office for minorities. ‘Not a single citizen of the new independent Kosovo will feel discriminated against or set aside,’ he said.” [28b] The USSD report for 2007 noted that “During the year violence and other crimes directed at minorities and their property lessened but remained a problem.” [2a] (Ethnic Minorities)

The 120,000 remaining ethnic Serbs are mainly located in the three northern municipalities of Leposavic, Zubin Potok, Zvecan; the most southerly municipality of Strpce, and in the northern half of the city of Mitrovica. (BBC News, 15 February 2008) [6e] (See Municipality Profiles below). The USSD report for 2007 noted that: “There were multiple reports of violence against Kosovo Serbs during the year, which was usually investigated by the international police unit, a unit composed of UN international police officers within the KPS that reports directly to the police commissioner, who is also an international staff member.” [2a] (Ethnic Minorities)

Many Serbs left other parts of Kosovo after the March 2004 riots, in which seven Serbs were killed. (BBC News, 17 April 2007) [6g] Serbs have a higher membership within the Kosovan Police Service (KPS), at ten percent of a force of 7,200 officers, than their proportion of the total Kosovo population. (BBC News, 15 February 2008) [6e] “The problem is not so much one of fear of discrimination, although there is some of that. Above all, it is a language issue. Few Serbs speak Albanian.” (BBC News, 15 February 2008) [6e]

Roma were subject to pervasive social and economic discrimination; often lacked access to basic hygiene, medical care, and education; and were heavily dependent on humanitarian aid for survival. Although there were some successful efforts to resettle Roma, Ashkali, and Egyptians in the homes they occupied prior to the 1999 conflict in Vucitrn/Vushtrri, security concerns remained.” (USSD report for 2007) [2a] (Ethnic Minorities)

Lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender persons

“Traditional societal attitudes about homosexuality intimidated most gays and lesbians into concealing their sexual orientation. Gays and lesbians generally felt insecure, with many reporting threats to their personal safety. The print media at times reinforced these attitudes by publishing negative articles about homosexuality that characterized gays and lesbians as mentally ill and prone to sexually assaulting children. Individual homosexuals also reported job discrimination. At least one political party, the Islamic-oriented Justice Party, included a condemnation of homosexuality in its political platform. On May 18 [2007], following a celebration of the International Day Against Homophobia outside Pristina, four males, three wearing dresses, were driving home when they were stopped by the police and forced out of their car. The police took them to a nearby police station, where, after compelling them to show their identification, officers made discriminatory and derogatory comments to them. The KPS did not open a file on this case, and the victims refused to give statements out of fear of further discrimination. The Center for Social Emancipation, a local NGO promoting lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender rights, stated that there were a number of other cases of discrimination against homosexuals during the year but that victims refused to allow it to present their cases publicly out of fear of discrimination. There were no updates in the March 2006 assault case involving unknown assailants who severely beat two men they observed engaging in homosexual sex. One of the victims later died of his injuries.” (USSD report for 2007) [2a] (Other societal abuses and discrimination)

Domestic Violence

“Domestic violence against women, including spousal abuse, remained a serious and persistent problem ...The KPS reported that 53 victims of domestic violence were housed in shelters during the year [2007]. The Center for Protection of Women and Children provided assistance to 43 victims of domestic and sexual violence from January to August 30. The Ministry of Justice Victim Advocate and Assistance Unit was involved in 334 domestic violence cases between January and June. Although convictions in such cases were rare, sentences ranged from judicial reprimands to imprisonment. Traditional social attitudes towards women in the male-dominated society contributed to the high level of domestic abuse and low number of reported cases. There were no governmental agencies dedicated solely to dealing with family violence. Six shelters assisted victims of domestic violence and trafficking, including one run by an international NGO and designed for minors and two that admitted victims of both domestic violence and trafficking. The KPS reported that 66 victims of domestic violence received shelter during the year. Several domestic and international NGOs pursued activities to assist women; however, they were constrained by a tradition of silence concerning domestic violence, sexual abuse, and rape.” (USSD report for 2007) [2a]

Freedom of Speech

Freedom House’s 2007 “Freedom of the Press” report noted that:

“The media environment in Kosovo is regulated by the UN Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) and the constitutional framework. While UNMIK, the NATO-led Kosovo Force, and Kosovo’s Provisional Institutions of Self-Government largely uphold press freedom, the media face a difficult operating environment owing to political pressure and financial difficulties. In January 2006, the Parliament passed legislation transferring authority over the public broadcaster, Radio Television Kosovo, from UNMIK to local government control and placed its budget under the direct control of the Ministry of Finance. Journalists faced indirect pressure and were offered bribes in exchange for positive coverage. Throughout the year, journalists were the victims of violence and harassment. In September [2006], a reporter with the daily Lajm Ekskluzive was assaulted by a security officer in the Kosovo assembly building. Lack of advertising funds leaves media outlets vulnerable to editorial pressure from government and business interests. The Pristina branch of the Albanian newspaper Bota Sot was closed down in November [2006] for failing to pay taxes, reducing the number of daily newspapers in Kosovo to nine. Media operating with foreign financial aid were more editorially independent and expressed a wider range of views, but they remained vulnerable to future fluctuations in foreign assistance.” [22b]

The USSD report for 2007 adds:

“UNMIK regulations and the constitutional framework provide for freedom of speech and of the press, and UNMIK and the PISG generally respected these rights in practice. However, there were reports of intimidation of reporters, including by officials in the public sector and government, and from politicians and businesses. The media also said they encountered difficulties and obstructions in obtaining information from the government and public institutions. Applicable law on broadcast media bans hate speech and speech that incites ethnic violence. Print media have a code of ethics and a self-regulatory body to deal with complaints related to newspaper articles. Individuals generally could criticize authorities publicly or privately without reprisal.” [2a] (Freedom of press and speech)
