

URGENT ACTION

PRISONER ENDS HUNGER STRIKE, BUT NO RETRIAL

On 8 June Mansur Mingelov ended a hunger strike that had lasted for almost three weeks after some Turkmenistani officials reportedly visited him in prison and the attitude of the prison authorities towards him has improved. However, there is no official indication that there will be a retrial in line with international fair trial standards in his case.

Mansur Mingelov had been on hunger strike since 19 May in protest at the 22-year sentence for alleged drug and pornography offences passed down to him after an unfair trial. Mansur Mingelov began to take liquid food again on 8 June. He is still in a prison hospital, where he is on a drip. According to a confidential source, he has started eating as a result of several visits from officials. However no information is available on the content of their discussion. The prison authorities have reportedly changed their attitude towards Mansur Mingelov. They are now being polite to him and regularly enquire about his wellbeing. On 19 May Mansur Mingelov, wrote to the administration of LBK/11 prison in Seidi, Lebap province in eastern Turkmenistan, where he is serving his sentence, to inform them about his decision to go on hunger strike. Mansur Mingelov's mother visited him on 10 June.

According to a confidential source, Mansur Mingelov denies all charges and maintains his innocence. He faced increased pressure in prison after he spoke out about the unfairness of his trial and protested against his possible transfer to the high security prison Ovadan-Depe as this is contrary to the conditions of his sentence. Prison authorities threatened to cut off visits from his family and limit the size of parcels he is allowed to receive.

Mansur Mingelov was first arrested and allegedly beaten by officers of the State Service for Security Protection of Healthy Society of Turkmenistan on 6 June 2012. This was in connection with a criminal case involving his brother who had been arrested a day earlier. Mansur Mingelov had witnessed his brother being beaten by security services during interrogation. Mansur Mingelov was released and re-arrested after he exposed cases of torture and other ill-treatment of individuals in custody. On 10 September 2012, he was sentenced following an unfair trial.

Amnesty International has documented cases from Turkmenistan in which individuals who suffered human rights violations and those associated with them, including family members, faced harassment and reprisals after their cases were exposed internationally. There are concerns that not only Mansur Mingelov but members of his extended family may be at risk of reprisals.

Please write immediately in Turkmen, Russian, English or your own language:

- Calling on the authorities to instigate a prompt retrial of Mansur Mingelov in line with international fair trial standards, including allowing him access to a lawyer of his choice;

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Mansur Mingelov was sentenced after an unfair trial on 10 September 2012 on charges of involving minors in “socially inappropriate actions”, production and distribution of pornography, contraband, and production or distribution of drugs under articles 156,164, 254 and 292 of the Criminal Code of Turkmenistan. According to a confidential source, Mansur Mingelov reports that he only saw his state-appointed lawyer twice, once when they first met and then during the trial itself. During the investigation and trial he was not allowed to call his relatives nor change his lawyer. After his arrest, Mansur Mingelov was forcibly moved to a regional drug rehabilitation centre and kept there for 15 days, and released on 22 June 2012. He then lodged complaints about his brother’s torture and ill-treatment with the Prosecutor General’s Office and the President of Turkmenistan. Two police officers were subsequently dismissed. From 25 June and up until 2 August 2012, when Mansur Mingelov was arrested again, he collected evidence of torture and ill-treatment from other individuals, most of whom were of Baloch origin living in Mary province in south-eastern Turkmenistan.

Mansur Mingelov has recorded 11 incidents of the torture and other ill-treatment from within the Baloch ethnic community in Mary province. He recorded the information on CD disks and sent them to the US Embassy in Ashgabat, the capital of Turkmenistan, the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) and the Prosecutor General’s Office. According to Mansur Mingelov these reports of torture and other ill-treatment included allegations of law enforcement officers using chisels on detainees’ bones, pulling of the scrotum with pliers, electric shocks, and the use of chair legs and plastic bottles for beatings. He described seeing a box with tools explicitly meant for torture at the State Service for Security Protection of Healthy Society of Turkmenistan in Ashgabat.

According to some Turkmenistani human rights defenders and journalists in exile, torture and ill-treatment is widespread in Turkmenistan. However the climate of fear is such that few people dare report incidents of torture and ill-treatment that occur in detention, or even talk about it following their release from detention. Doing so exposes them and members of their extended families to reprisals from the authorities, and Amnesty International has documented cases of harassment and persecution of those who dared to publicly expose such human rights violations in Turkmenistan. Please see Amnesty International’s report Turkmenistan: An “Era of Happiness” or more of the same repression? (Index EUR 61/005/2013) for more information, accessible at <http://www.amnesty.org/en/library/info/EUR61/005/2013/en>.

Amnesty International is not aware of a single case in which perpetrators of torture and other ill-treatment have been criminally prosecuted in Turkmenistan, nor of case where evidence obtained through the use of torture or other ill-treatment has been excluded from court proceedings. In its Concluding Observations on Turkmenistan, the UN Committee against Torture (CAT) noted that “the absence of comprehensive or disaggregated data on complaints, investigations, prosecutions and convictions in cases of torture and ill-treatment by law enforcement personnel severely hampers the identification of possible patterns of abuse requiring attention”, and recommended that the Turkmenistani authorities compile and provide clear statistical data on such issues.

In its Concluding Observations in June 2011 the UN CAT expressed concern at reports of violations of fundamental safeguards against torture such as the right of prompt access to a defence lawyer upon detention.
