Law “On the Protection of the Rights of the Child” aims at improving the system of child protection and provides for measures guaranteeing the life, upbringing and development of the child through the coordination of all actors. This law defines the monitoring mechanisms for the implementation of law, responsibilities of central and local government, the setting up of responsible institutions and administrative sanctions for cases of violation of child rights. Further, it provides for the protection of children from trafficking and from any form of exploitation and sexual ill treatment.

85. The Criminal Code provision on the offence of pornography is amended by adding new elements and making the punishment more severe. Regarding the offence of “trafficking in human beings” two provisions are added “Profiting or using services provided by trafficked persons” “Actions that facilitate trafficking” where more severe punishments are envisaged if these offences are committed against children.

86. Law “On Pre-University Education System” provides for the protection of child rights; the right to the qualitative education and equal opportunities; provides protection from discrimination, violence, maltreatment; special treatment is provided to students of families in need and students with disabilities. The principle of all-inclusiveness is applied in educational institutions.

87. Law “On Social Assistance and Services” provides for economic assistance and social care even for children without parental care, services of social care; their functioning and funding; categories of beneficiaries; services to be provided to children in residential institutions. The novelty brought through this law is the possibility of creating the service of custody.

The Joint Order between the Ministry of Social Welfare and Youth and the Ministry of Interior “On the Protection of the rights of children exposed to different forms of abuse” strengthens cooperation between the responsible structures. The criteria for accepting persons in public and non-public residential social care institutions are defined. Children from the age of 6-16 are accommodated at children’s home for school age (orphanage); Orphan children stay at these institutions until the age of 18⁴.

Policies

89. The Social Protection Cross Cutting Strategy laid down the objectives of decentralizing and deinstitutionalizing social care services for children. Reforming social services in social care facilities during the process of deinstitutionalization includes three alternatives: returning institutionalized children to their biological families (or to guardians, relatives); domestic and international adoption; placing children under temporary custody. Policies on protection of child rights occupied an important place in the National Strategy of Development and Integration 2007-2013⁵.

90. The Action Plan on Children 2012-2015 aims at strengthening the functioning of institutional mechanisms in application of the law and promoting the local government to draft comprehensive policies for children. The Plan defines concrete measures and activities related to application of policies and objectives for the welfare of the child; policies for the prevention and protection from violence and exploitation; policies to ensure a comprehensive educational system; health care; policies in the field of juvenile justice. In some regions of the country the inter-institutional cooperation at central and local level is translated into strategy and action plans to guarantee the promotion and protection of child rights.

Institutions and mechanisms

94. Promoting custodial service as a new alternative of family services is based on the process of decentralization and deinstitutionalization and of setting up new community services, where the child is supported and assisted in a family environment. The state provides financial support for a child placed in a custodial family to cover expenses of food, clothing, education and other indirect expenses and a greater support is provided when a child is with disabilities.

95. In relation to child labor, the law "On the Protection of the Rights of the Child" provides for protection from economic exploitation and from performing any work that is likely to be hazardous or to interfere with the child's education, or to be harmful to the child's health or physical, mental, spiritual, moral or social development, such as forced labor and employment of children under 16 is prohibited.

Penal Code defines the basic criteria when criminal responsibility starts in children, the special measures and punishments rendered to children, making a clear division from those rendered to adults. The law “On Legal Aid” provides for the provision of legal aid even for minors.

100. In all cases of escort or detention/arrest in police stations, children stay in separate environments, separately from adults. Registration of escorted/detained children is duly done and there are not any identified cases of violation or shortcoming.
