	Status during previous cycle	Action after review	Not ratified
Ratification, accession or succession	Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and Additional Protocols I and II <sup>5</sup>	ILO Convention No. 182 <sup>7</sup>	Palermo Protocol <sup>8</sup>
	ILO fundamental convention No.138 <sup>6</sup>		Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide
	UNESCO Convention against Discrimination in Education		ILO fundamental conventions except Nos.138 and 182 <sup>9</sup>
			Conventions on refugees and stateless persons <sup>10</sup>
			Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court
			ILO Conventions Nos. 169 and 189 <sup>11</sup>
			Additional Protocol III to the 1949 Geneva Conventions <sup>12</sup>

1. While noting the general reservations of the Government of Brunei Darussalam to CRC and CEDAW, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) recommended that the Government review its broad reservations to those treaties, in order to improve its accountability for international obligations, and review national legislation in conformity with the above-mentioned conventions and international obligations.<sup>13</sup>

2. The United Nations Economic, Social and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) stated that Brunei Darussalam had been party to the 1960 UNESCO Convention against Discrimination in Education since 1985. However, it did not report to UNESCO on the measures taken for the implementation of the 1960 UNESCO Recommendation against Discrimination in Education within the framework of the sixth consultation of member States (covering the period 1994–1999), seventh consultation of member States (covering the period 2000–2005) and eighth consultation of member States (covering the period 2006–2011).<sup>14</sup>

3. UNESCO also stated that the Government of Brunei Darussalam had recently taken important steps towards protecting cultural rights through the ratification of the 1972 Convention Concerning the Protection of the World Cultural and Natural Heritage and the 2003 Convention for the Safeguarding of Intangible Cultural Heritage.<sup>15</sup>

4. UNHCR stated that, notwithstanding the fact that there were currently no asylum seekers and refugees in the country, accession to the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and its 1967 Protocol and the establishment of a national legal framework would establish a clearer basis for the Government of Brunei Darussalam to provide refugees with international protection should anyone seek asylum there in future. In that connection, UNHCR recommended that Brunei Darussalam accede to the Convention and its Protocol and enact a national refugee law to establish procedures for the determination of refugee status and spell out the rights of refugees in the country.<sup>16</sup>

5. UNHCR also stated that Brunei Darussalam was not a party to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons or the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness. Accession to those conventions would establish a stronger framework to prevent and reduce statelessness and avoid the detrimental effects of statelessness on individuals and society by ensuring minimum standards of treatment for stateless persons.<sup>17</sup>

B. Constitutional and legislative framework

6. UNESCO noted that the 1959 constitution of Brunei Darussalam, as last amended in 2008, did not guarantee the right to education. It did not contain any provision regarding education or the principle of non-discrimination.<sup>18</sup>

7. UNESCO also noted that the basic legislative framework for education in Brunei Darussalam consisted of the Education (Non-Government Schools) Act (chapter 55), 1984, which was repealed by the Education Order of 31 December, 2003; the Compulsory Education Order, 2007; the Child Care Centre Order, 2006; and the Education (Brunei Board of Examinations) Law, 1984.<sup>19</sup>

C. Institutional and human rights infrastructure and policy measures

8. While noting the efforts of Brunei Darussalam to register births, UNHCR recommended that the Government of Brunei Darussalam continue its outreach programme, under which it made presentations related to birth registration, and evaluate if more areas of the country needed to be covered or more steps taken to ensure access to universal birth registration.<sup>20</sup>

II. Cooperation with human rights mechanisms

A. Cooperation with treaty bodies<sup>21</sup>

III. Implementation of international human rights obligations

A. Equality and non-discrimination

9. UNHCR noted that under the Brunei Nationality Act, only fathers could confer their nationality on their children. In that connection, UNHCR recommended that Brunei Darussalam reform the Nationality Act to address the concerns of the Committee on the Rights of the Child regarding equality between women and men in their ability to confer their nationality on their children.<sup>23</sup>

B. Right to life, liberty and security of the person

10. In its direct request adopted in 2011, the ILO Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and Recommendations requested the Government to redouble its efforts to ensure the effective monitoring of the sale and trafficking of children and to provide information on measures taken to strengthen the capacity of immigration officials to combat the trafficking of children. It also requested the Government to provide information on the application of the provisions of the Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons Order prohibiting the sale and trafficking of children including, in particular, statistics on the number and nature of violations reported, investigations, prosecutions, convictions and penalties imposed.<sup>24</sup>

11. In its direct request, the Committee of Experts noted that Brunei Darussalam did not have a proactive system to formally identify victims of trafficking among vulnerable groups, such as foreign workers and foreign women and children in prostitution, and that the Government had not implemented training for its officials on identifying trafficking victims. It also observed that children of migrant workers were at increased risk of becoming victims of sale and trafficking and requested the Government to take effective and time-bound measures to ensure that this group of children were protected from that worst form of child labour.<sup>25</sup>

12. The Committee observed that the use of children under 18 years for prostitution, i.e. by a client, did not seem to be prohibited. Furthermore, it observed that only the procuring and offering of girls under 18 years of age appeared to be prohibited by national legislation. The Committee reminded the Government that article 3 (b) of ILO Convention No. 182 required member States to ensure that the use, procuring or offering of both boys and girls under 18 years of age for prostitution is strictly prohibited. The Committee therefore requested the Government to take the necessary measures to ensure that the use, procuring or offering of both boys and girls under the age of 18 for the purpose of prostitution was prohibited.<sup>26</sup>

13. The Committee also noted that there did not appear to be a provision in national laws specifically prohibiting the use, procuring or offering of a child for the production of pornography or pornographic performances, as required by article 3 b) of Convention No. 182. The Committee requested the Government to indicate the measures taken or envisaged to ensure that the use, procuring or offering of boys and girls under 18 years of age for the production of pornography or pornographic performances was prohibited.<sup>27</sup>

14. Furthermore, the Committee requested the Government to take the necessary measures to ensure that sufficient up-to-date data on the prevalence of the worst forms of child labour in the country is made available, particularly with regard to child trafficking. It also requested the Government to provide that information and any additional available information on the nature, extent and trends of the worst forms of child labour and the number of children protected by the measures giving effect to Convention No. 182. To the extent possible, the information should be disaggregated by age and sex.<sup>28</sup>

C. Freedom of expression

15. UNESCO noted that freedom of expression and press freedom were limited in Brunei Darussalam by various legal provisions. The Local Newspapers Order (1958/2001) made it mandatory to obtain annual publishing permits from the Minister of Home Affairs for starting a newspaper. The Minister could refuse, suspend or revoke licences without giving a reason and those decisions were not subject to appeal or judicial review.<sup>29</sup>

16. UNESCO noted that the Sedition Act included a penalty of up to three years of imprisonment for publishing materials with seditious intentions, including materials critical of the royal family. It also noted that the Undesirable Publication Act empowered the Minister to prohibit importation or sales of publications deemed to be against the public interest. Additionally, the Internal Security Act allowed the authorities to detain an individual without charge or trial for a period of up to two years, which could be further lengthened indefinitely in the name of maintaining public order.<sup>30</sup>

17. UNESCO also noted that, under article 500 of the penal code, defamation was criminalized by up to five years' imprisonment and a fine.<sup>31</sup>

18. UNESCO recommended that Brunei Darussalam implement reforms to bring its laws and practices into line with international standards for press freedom and freedom of expression, including the Sedition Act, the Local Newspapers Order (1958/2001), the Undesirable Publication Act, the Internal Security Act and the penal code. UNESCO also recommended that Brunei Darussalam be encouraged to begin introducing a freedom of information law in line with international standards and introduce self-regulatory mechanisms for the media.<sup>32</sup>

D. Right to work and to just and favourable conditions of work

19. The ILO Committee of Experts reminded the Government that, under article 3 (d) of ILO Convention No. 182, children under 18 years of age should not perform work, which by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm their health, safety or morals and that this applies to both industrial and non-industrial undertakings. The Committee requested the Government to take the necessary measures to develop and adopt a list determining the types of hazardous work prohibited for persons under 18 years of age, in consultation with the organization of employers and workers concerned. In this regard, the Committee also requested the Government to indicate whether the Minister of Labour had declared any industrial undertaking to be an undertaking in which no young person shall be employed.<sup>33</sup>

20. While noting information from the Government that the National Children's Council, established and officially launched in 2001, is responsible for monitoring the rules and regulations pertaining to children, the Committee requested the Government to provide information on the role of the Council with regard to the prevention and elimination of the worst forms of child labour and on the results achieved.<sup>34</sup>

E. Right to education

21. UNESCO noted that the right to education was highlighted in the Education Policy, 1992, whereby at least 12 years education is offered for all children: 1 year of pre-school, 6 years of formal primary education, 3 years of lower secondary and 2 years of upper secondary or vocational/technical education.<sup>35</sup>

22. UNESCO recommended that Brunei Darussalam be encouraged to implement awareness-raising projects and activities to combat discriminatory attitudes, promote the right to education for all and further its efforts to promote human rights education and training.<sup>36</sup>

F. Cultural rights

23. According to UNESCO, one key challenge for Brunei Darussalam concerns the need to increase the capacity of key stakeholders, especially community members, Government, non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and other organizations, regarding the mechanisms for safeguarding its tangible and intangible cultural heritage. This is especially the case with regard to the protection of the intangible cultural heritage, where Brunei Darussalam faces a number of challenges, including acquiring sufficient national funds and the expertise available for the specific area of the protection of its intangible cultural heritage and the need to develop legal and institutional frameworks to safeguard it and create greater capacity and knowledge among governmental staff, NGOs and community groups involved in its protection.<sup>37</sup>

G. Migrants, refugees and asylum seekers

24. UNHCR noted Government reports that there were no asylum seekers or refugees in the country. As of 30 December 2012, the Government reported a stateless population of 21,009 persons.<sup>38</sup> UNHCR also noted that since 2012, the Government had shared statistics with it on the number of registered stateless people, who are permanently resident in the country, including the numbers of stateless people who have acquired Brunei Darussalam nationality.<sup>39</sup>

25. As such, UNHCR welcomed the steps that the Government of Brunei Darussalam was taking to facilitate the integration and naturalization of stateless persons who are permanent residents. It was reported that 2,420 stateless persons acquired Brunei Darussalam citizenship between the beginning of 2009 and the end of 2012 as a result.<sup>40</sup>
