Report of the Government of the Republic of Cape Verde pursuant to operative paragraph 6 of resolution 1373 (2001) of the Security Council of the United Nations

Introduction

The Government of Cape Verde condemned in the strongest terms the perpetration of the terrorist attacks committed against the United States on September 11. The leaders of all political parties expressed similar positions. In many places of the country ordinary citizens gathered or organized demonstrations against these barbaric acts. Two days of national mourning were declared.

In view of the events, the Capeverdean authorities implemented immediate measures intended to raise the level of security, namely in and around international airports. Police personnel were increased and the schemes of control of movements of passengers and baggage were tied. At the same time the Head of the government, Mr José Maria Pereira Neves, announced that a new special detachment would be created to deal with airport security as well as a service of information and security.

On the other hand the government has declared its readiness to co-operate with the international efforts aimed at combating terrorism.

The Government is also studying closely the resolution 1373 (2001) and is preparing to take the necessary steps to implement it.

In this context, a national committee headed by the Minister for Foreign Affairs, Cooperation and Communities and integrated by representatives of all pertinent sectors such as police, justice, defence, civil protection, health, finance, banking, civil aviation, telecommunication, transportation, public administration and insurance has been created by the Government. This committee will serve as a dynamic and proactive catalytic interface between the United Nations and all other interested party and Capeverdean involved operational and or executive organisms with a view to ensure steadfast implementation by the country of the provisions of Security Council 1373 (2001) Resolution.

Cape Verde is party to some international conventions and protocols to combat terrorism and is taking the necessary steps to become a party to the remainder in the near future in accordance with the procedures established by its national law.

Cape Verde is of the view that either those responsible for the 10/11 terrorist attacks or any other person, who committed, participated or were accomplice in any terrorist act or in any other related act must be brought to justice and all States should co-operate to this end. However, caution should be used to ensure that no more innocent people be added to the already too the long list of victims of those crimes and serve as further excuse for committing new acts of terror.

Cape Verde is convinced that from now on terrorism must have a strong and resolute combat through appropriate responses and preventive measures designed to stop criminal violence vested with political or religious motivations. No country is safe from such attacks or from the use of its territory for the practice of such terrorist actions. Therefore, any strategy aimed at eliminating once and for all this dangerous threat to international peace and security must be a common strategy with the participation of a large number of the members of the international community and in which the United Nations should have a decisive role.

Cape Verde recognizes also that besides prosecuting and punishing the perpetrators of terrorist acts, it is necessary to deprive them from their breeding grounds. A successful campaign to eradicate terrorism has to address the long-term challenges that were so eloquently enumerated in the Millennium Declaration. As long as political, economic and social injustices are allowed to prevail there will always be people trying to exploit them for their narrow political agendas or criminal purposes. As long as the international community lacks the capacity to put an end to conflicts and address their real causes, there will be no shortage of recruits for all sorts of desperate acts.

While adopting the necessary measures to eliminate the threat posed by the activities of terrorist groups, their master minds and supporters, it is important to ensure that the already scarce resources intended to promote economic and social development of developing countries are not diverted. Instead, the developed countries should make a stronger commitment to help put an end to poverty, deprivation and marginalization, particularly in the Least Developed Countries.

This commitment should start now, by helping developing countries face the additional burden brought by their own effort to participate in the international campaign against international terrorism. By redirecting a share of their already scarce resources to increase the level of security, they are led to reduce their capacity in addressing the huge challenges of providing for the basic needs of their impoverished populations.

In one word, the United Nations should play a decisive role in this co-operation by adopting effective measures and reinforcing the legal framework aimed at combating terrorism.

Cape Verde urges an early adoption of the General Convention against Terrorism despite some difficulties, namely in what concerns the definition of terrorism. For this purpose Cape Verde supports the Non Aligned Movement's proposal to convene under the auspices of the United Nations a high-level conference to unite the international efforts and adopt a co-ordinated response to suppress and eliminate terrorism.

Paragraph 1

(a) Cape Verde has already legislation (Law nr. 78/IV/93, of 12 of July) against money laundering related to unlawful traffic of drugs and other goods and products acquired through other grave crimes as provided for in article 2, paragraph 1 of this law.

However, taking into account, among others, the need:

(i) to enlarge the object of the crime of money laundering,

(ii) to limit the scope of the duty of banking secret,

(iii) to establish governing rules for the functioning of banking entities with a view to prevent money laundering,

(iv) to consecrate the obligation of banking entities to gather information about the real identity of the beneficiaries of banking or financial operations, while performing their activities,

(v) to make it obligatory that all international transfers of currency, exchange value or bond exceeding one million Capeverdean escudos be made through banking or financial institutions duly authorized to make such transfers,

(vi) to establish the obligation of declaring in the entry point of the national territory of an amount of national or foreign currency equivalent to one million Capeverdean escudos,

(vii) to grant control and regulatory powers to the authorities in charge of the supervision and regulation of the financial and banking systems necessary to enable them to establish the administrative regulations and to monitor the compliance with legislation and norms designed to prevent money laundering,

(viii) to put in place criminal procedural norms allowing the competent national judicial authorities to cooperate efficaciously with INTERPOL and with foreign authorities competent to investigate and punish money laundering offences, and

(ix) to establish necessary preventive legal measures aimed at guaranteeing the execution of judicial decisions, namely foreign judicial decisions, determining the lost or apprehension of assets, products or capitals, even when the facts related to money laundering have been committed abroad, provided that assets, products and capitals related to this money laundering offence are in Cape Verde.

The Government has asked for legislative authorization and obtained approval from the Parliament through the Law 129/V/2001, of January 22.

Nevertheless, the end of the previous legislature brought to its end the said authorization. For this reason, the draft Legislative Decree prepared on the basis of that authorization could not be approved. The new Government, after having reviewed it is on the verge of taking early action in 2002 either by asking for a new legislative authorization either by submitting a proposal of Law for approval of the Parliament. The national committee created with a view to facilitate the implementation of Resolution 1373 (2001) has already decided to include this matter as one that will be inscribed in its plan of action for 2002.

(b) What was said in (a) applies to this sub-paragraph.

(c) What was said in (a) applies to this sub-paragraph. However the Capeverdean authorities have no knowledge whatsoever of such kind of activities being taking place in Cape Verde so far. For this reason no action has been taken in this field up to this moment.
