HIGHLIGHTS

- On 9 December, in a briefing to the UN Security Council, the Under-Secretary-General for UN Peacekeeping Operations, Mr. Hervé Ladsous, urged the international community to remain engaged in the Central African Republic. He stated that the country was entering a “critical phase at a time when international attention to the crisis is starting to wane”. Mr. Ladsous mentioned that the risks in the country remained high and potentially explosive amid continuing violence in various parts of the country. Nevertheless, Mr. Ladsous noted that the political process is “moving forward” as all actors seek to convene for the Bangui Forum scheduled for early 2015 that would then function as “the starting point for a longer term reconciliation process”.
- Over the course of the week, UNHCR conducted border monitoring missions to Gbiti and Kentzou in the East region of Cameroon to inform refugees settled in border villages of the risks of staying at the border. During these sensitizations, refugees were encouraged to move to villages further away from the border for their own safety.
