EnclosureBrazil: fifth report to the Counter-Terrorism Committee on the implementation of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001)*1. Implementation measures*Effectiveness in the protection of the financial system

1.1 The CTC takes positive note of the measures that Brazil has so far taken to enact legislation to prevent and suppress the financing of terrorism and ratify nine international conventions and protocols relating to terrorism. The CTC would however, be grateful to receive a copy of the amended Act 9613/98 and Act 7.170/83 which according to the third report (at page 3) criminalize the financing of terrorism.

See Annexes 1 and 2.

1.2 Subparagraph 3 (d) and (e) of the Resolution calls upon States to become parties to and implement fully the relevant conventions and protocols relating to terrorism. Brazil indicates in its fourth report (at page 19) that three conventions and protocols relating to terrorism are under consideration by the National Congress for approval before ratification. The CTC would be grateful to be kept abreast of the latest developments in this regard.

The Federal Government is committed to the prompt ratification of the three remaining Conventions to combat terrorism and is doing its utmost to promote their approval by the National Congress.

Brazil has issued a series of Executive Decrees to implement the relevant United Nations Security Council Resolutions by incorporating the text of the Resolutions into the domestic legal regime. In this manner, Decree 3976 of 18 October 2001 implements S/RES/1373(2001); Decree 3755 of 19 February 2001 implements S/RES/1333(2000); Decree 4150 of 6 March 2002 implements S/RES/1390(2002), and Decree 3267, of 30 November 1999 implements S/RES/1267(1999), and its successor resolutions. As provided by the resolutions, these Decrees provide for enforcing sanctions related to the Taliban and Osama bin Laden, including a specific list of designated persons and entities. Decree 3976 of 18 October 2001 implements the provisions of S/RES/1373(2001).

* Annexes are on file with the Secretariat and are available for consultation.

Following the usual procedure for consideration of multilateral treaties, the UN Convention on the Suppression of Terrorism Financing was approved by the Lower Chamber of the National Congress on February 2005. After that, members of the Council for Control of Financial Activities – COAF, the Brazilian FIU, paid a visit to the rapporteur and to the Chairman of the Senate’s Commission of Foreign Relations and National Defense. As a result, it was also approved by the Brazilian Senate on June 2005. Its ratification is expected to occur in the near future.

The SUA Convention and its Protocol on fixed platforms are also following the normal procedure in Congress. The two instruments have gone through several commissions of the Lower Chamber, which approved them on July 2005. They will be submitted to the examination of the Senate. Their ratification is expected during the 2005 congressional session.

1.3 Subparagraph 3 (e) of the Resolution calls upon States to implement fully the relevant conventions and protocols relating to terrorism. Regarding effective implementation of Article 18 of the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism, Brazil indicates in its fourth report (at page 11) that the ratification process of the convention is linked to the evaluation and suggestion of changes in the draft legislation that, inter alia, broadens the types of money laundering crimes and administrative measures for the freezing of assets. The CTC would be grateful to be informed of the enactment of legislation in this regard and to receive a copy thereof.

Brazil indicates that Law 9613 provides authority to freeze and seize the assets pertaining not only to suspected terrorists and terrorist organisations, but also to those who finance terrorism, irrespective of the inclusion of those persons and organisations in a list maintained by the UN Security Council.

As mentioned above, since Law 9613 establishes terrorism and (as amended) its financing as a predicate offence for money laundering, Brazilian courts have authority to freeze and seize, and confiscate the suspected "objects" of terrorism or terrorist financing offences. Article 4 indicates that "upon request made by the prosecutor or the competent police authority, after consulting the prosecutor within twenty-four hours, and with sufficient evidence, the judge may order the seizure or detention of assets, rights and other values that constitute the object of the crimes referred to in this Law, and which belong to the defendant or are registered under his/her name."

Brazilian competent authorities are also entitled to freeze and confiscate assets involved in the preparation or the actual perpetration of crimes described in Law 7170, of 14 December 1983, such as to "devastate, plunder, extort, steal, kidnap, keep in illegal prison, set on fire, depredate, provoke explosion, practice personal attacks or acts of terrorism, for political reasons or for obtaining funds destined to the maintaining of clandestine or subversive political organizations" (Article 20) or "constitute, integrate or maintain a military-like illegal organization, of any kind, armed or not, with or without uniform, with a fighting objective" (Article 24).

COAF has received several lists of individuals and entities that are either involved or suspected of involvement in terrorist activities. COAF has included these names in its database and has immediately disclosed that information to relevant governmental agencies, such as the Federal Police, the Secretariat for Federal Revenue, the Brazilian Agency of Intelligence, and the Central Bank, so that the appropriate measures could be adopted. In addition, COAF regularly checks the national register of legal entities (CNPJ) and the taxpayer identification database (CPF) in order to verify if wanted natural or legal persons have legally operated in Brazil. Likewise, the Central Bank of Brazil discloses the above mentioned information to all financial institutions, in order to check if suspects have been operating in the financial system, have banking accounts or possess other types of assets in the country.

Under "Goal 20 of the National Strategy to Combat Money Laundering" (ENCLA 2004) – see text below –, the Cabinet for Integrated Management and Combat against Money Laundering (GGI – LD) is drafting a new bill, which will modify Law 9618/98 (which criminalizes money laundering).

Goal 20: To evaluate and to suggest changes in the law projects that: broaden the types of the money laundering crimes in order to avoid the exhaustive list of antecedent crimes; introduce the administrative blockade of illicit assets; define criminal organization; typify the crimes of terrorism and terrorism financing; modify the Law 9613/98. The task force (consisting of representatives of AGU, COAF, DRCI, CJP, MPF, CGU and ABIN) must be responsible for accompanying the projects in the National Congress, electing as a goal their approval until October 2004. The task force must also accompany the approval of the international treaties signed by Brazil, which relate to anti-money laundering policies.

Instead of criminalizing as money laundering only the revenues deriving, directly or indirectly, from certain predicated offenses (including the crime of terrorism), as defined under Law 9613/98, the new draft determines that the revenues deriving from any criminal offense encompassed in the Brazilian penal system that leads to a sentence of up to 2 years of imprisonment may be charged as money laundering.

The Brazilian authorities expect that such amendment will ensure significant progress in the combat against money laundering and expedite the recovery of assets illegally obtained or put into use for the preparation of crimes, such as terrorism. In addition, the draft also includes provisions for the aggravation of the penalty of the offender should the predicated crime be committed by an international criminal organization.

1.4 The effective implementation of subparagraph 1 (a) of the Resolution requires financial institutions and other intermediaries to identify their clients and to report suspicious transactions to the competent authorities. The CTC is grateful for the detailed report on suspicious transactions (at page 13) of the fourth report. Brazil indicated (at page 14 of the fourth report), that the number of suspicious financial transaction reports (STRs) that resulted in investigations, prosecutions or convictions, would be provide by 31 October 2004. The CTC would further be grateful to receive such information in Brazil's next report.

All the requests received by COAF have been responded to within a reasonable period of time.

Law 9613/98 determines that COAF shall notify the competent authorities whenever it finds evidence of the crimes defined in this Law or of any other illicit activity, so that the appropriate legal measures can be adopted. In accordance with that determination, COAF forwarded 336 reports to the competent authorities in 2004.

Regarding the exchange of information with foreign FIU or pertinent authorities of other countries, Decree 2799/98 establishes that COAF may share information with relevant authorities of foreign countries and international organizations based on reciprocity or on bilateral and multilateral agreements. A detailed research is currently being carried out within all the states of the Brazilian federation in order to compile statistical data from the various states, regarding the number of investigations, prosecutions, convictions, acquittals and sentences related to money laundering crimes, both on the federal and state level. A simultaneous project is being implemented by the Asset Recovery and International Mutual Legal Cooperation Department (DRCI), with a view to verifying the effectiveness of the National Strategy of Combat against Money Laundering (ENCLA), through the collection of statistical data from the Judiciary regarding the number of investigations, prosecutions and convictions specifically involving money laundering offenses. It will be possible, from the analysis of the obtained results, to assess the concrete results of ENCLA, whose Goal 17 foresees the publication of monthly statistics on the issue.

Goal 17: To publish, in coordination with the MPF, PF, DRCI, and State Courts of Justice, monthly statistics on the number of investigations, criminal procedures, convictions, acquittals and the amounts involved in the judicial sentences related to the crime of money laundering, on both federal and state levels. This information must be organized by geographical areas.

The Brazilian Central Bank has issued several regulations on this issue that are being implemented by financial institutions (FIs) under its supervision. Previously to the enactment of Law 9613, Central Bank has issued resolution 2025 of November 24, 1993, amended by Resolution 2747, of June 28, 2000, setting minimum identification requirements for opening deposit accounts. These requirements include information such as: the customer’s name, address, occupation, nationality, identity card, taxpayer identification number (CPF), in the case of natural persons, and the legal name, main activity, address and legal entities national register number (CNPJ) in the case of legal entities. Customer identification requirements for legal entities include the individuals who are legally authorized to represent them, as well as their owners.

Circular 3006 of the Central Bank, of September 5, 2000 established that FIs must check the status of account owners or their representatives in the Taxpayer Identification Register during the account opening process.

According to Circular 2852 of the Central Bank, of December 3, 1998, financial institutions and other institutions authorized to operate by Central Bank shall maintain updated records of their respective customers and consolidated internal controls and records that make it possible to verify not only the precise customer identification, but also the compatibility among the respective customer's fund transfers, economic activity and financial standing.

Other rules issued by Central Bank have established identification procedures for payment and receipt of cash transactions (Resolution 1946 of July 29, 1992), holding of banking accounts by non-resident clients (Circular 2677 of the Central Bank, of April 10, 1996), opening and transacting on deposit accounts through electronic means including through the internet (Resolution 2817, of February 22, 2001), check transactions and other instruments for transfer of funds (Circular Central Bank 3030, of April 12, 2001) and foreign exchange transactions (Foreign Exchange Rules Consolidation - CNC).

The identification of clients should take place by the time a business relationship is established. With that end, the presentation of appropriate original documentation and written confirmation by authorized bank staff are legally required. The law also requires the identification of the persons whenever the financial institutions have reasons to believe that a suspicious transaction involving money laundering is being executed or when there is reason to suspect that the identification procedures are being circumvented by the client or prospective client.

Non-resident clients have similar identification requirements as domestic clients and require copies of documents presented as identification to be certified by a public notary or a Brazilian Embassy official abroad.

Law 9613 requires records to be kept in a manner and form that allows financial institutions to readily and speedily reproduce the records, information or documents in usable form.

Law 8021, of April 12, 1990, requires that every owner or beneficiary of shares, securities or any kind of deposit or financial investment must be properly identified.

Section 64 of Law 8383, of December 30, 1991, establishes that account managers and other FIs employees shall be charged for allowing accounts opening or funds transfers carried out by non-existent natural persons or legal entities, or customers with fictitious names.

The Central Bank is entitled to access financial institutions' internal control document and verify the compliance with the identification and due diligence requirements during the course of its onsite examinations program.

Numbered accounts are not allowed in the Brazilian Financial System.

Effectiveness of customs, immigration and border control

1.5 The effective implementation of subparagraph 2 (g) of the Resolution requires that borders be efficiently controlled in order to prevent the movement of terrorists or terrorist groups. With a view to achieving this efficiency, has Brazil put in place a unified data system for use at all entry or exit points? If such is not the case, how many entry or exit points, whether by air, land, or sea, are currently included in the existing data system. Does Brazil's system register traveler data immediately upon entry or exit, or is this data entered later?

Brazil has in place a unified data system for use at all entry or exit points, named "SINTI" - National System for International Movement, which is on-line and available in the whole national territory. However, the data is not immediately registered upon entry or exit: this work is done at a later stage. Every foreigner, upon entering the national territory, must present the Card for Entrance / Exit properly filled out together with his/her travel document. Such Card has two parts; one stays with the Brazilian Federal Police Department at the entrance point, the other stays with the foreigner during his/her stay. Upon entering the national territory, whether by land, air or sea, the data from the Card is compared with that of the Passport - or of the identity card, required for citizens from MERCOSUR countries - by the migration agent at the point of control. Soon after, the Card is sent for typing and the foreigner's data is inserted in the SINTI. The information inserted includes: name, gender, date of birth, nationality, country of residence and of origin, number and type of the travel document, place and way of entry (air, land or sea), classification of the purpose of the travel (businesses, tourism, etc.), and granted period for stay in Brazil.

1.6 If “traveler data systems” are maintained at all border points, do these systems incorporate information of a ‘watch list’ nature? If such is the case, is the information in question updated regularly, taking into account all the relevant sources?

SINPI - National System for Wanted or Impeded Persons (interlinked to SINTI) includes a List of Wanted and Impeded Persons, Open Arrest Orders and lists of persons impeded from leaving Brazil, among others. Both SINPI and SINTI are online and available in the whole national territory. SINPI is regularly updated and fed by information coming from every part of the national territory.

1.7 Regarding the effective control of the issue of identity papers and travel documents referred to in subparagraph 2 (g) of the Resolution, does Brazil issue national identity documents? If so, who is entitled to receive the document? Could Brazil also provide the CTC with information as to the type of data stored and the agencies with which such information is shared?

Yes, Brazil issues national identity documents (identity cards and passport for Brazilian nationals and the identity document for foreigners). Any Brazilian citizen is entitled to receive the document, provided he/she has fulfilled civil and military obligations and provided there is no judiciary order to the contrary.

Local institutes of identification issue identity documents, which have validity all over Brazil. The issuing agencies keep in file the data of the qualification, photography and fingerprints of the people. The data kept in official files, in the issuing agencies, can be shared with other official institutions, by request, only for government affairs.

1.8 Does Brazil allow for the routine entry into, or exit out of, its territory by its nationals or by nationals from other States on production of a national identity card (as opposed to a passport)?

Brazil allows only for nationals of MERCOSUR countries (Argentina, Paraguay, Uruguay and Chile), the use of identity document, instead of the passport, for the entry and exit of its territory.

1.9 Furthermore, the CTC would be grateful if Brazil could specify the contact points it has established for international cooperation to combat terrorism and their respective areas of responsibility.

 General-Coordination of Combat against Transnational Crime (COCIT), of the Ministry of External Relations – its areas of responsibility are: coordination of international cooperation activities among Brazilian governmental institutions and their foreign counterparts in the areas of drug demand and supply reduction; coordination of the Brazilian participation in international events, in multilateral as well as in bilateral forums, which regard the combat against organized crime, under all its forms, including drug trafficking and connected crimes, money laundering, corruption and terrorism.*

 Brazilian Intelligence Agency (ABIN), of the Institutional Security Cabinet of the Presidency of the Republic – its areas of responsibility are: planning, coordinating, supervising and controlling counter-terrorist activities; following the activities of foreign terrorist and insurgency groups, as well as verifying whether there are links in Brazil; elaborate strategic reports about the development of international terrorism and its consequences for the country, identifying weaknesses of the state mechanisms; keeping a constant flow of terrorism-related information; and capacity-building.*

 Council for Financial Activities Control (COAF), of the Ministry of Finance - its areas of responsibility are: checking whether any suspected person or legal entity which has operated in the financial system or holds accounts or any other kind of assets.*

 Assets Recovery and International Mutual Legal Cooperation Department (DRCI), of the Ministry of Justice - its areas of responsibility are: Asset Recovery and International Judicial Cooperation.*

The Brazilian Government, through its Chamber of External Relations and National Defense of the Council of Government (CREDEN), the highest body within the Federal Government for policy coordination and implementation, has created a Technical Group (GT) which will be in charge of the National Policy for Prevention of and Combat against Terrorism.

The mission of the group is to elaborate proposals not only for a national policy but also for establishing a framework for counterterrorism in Brazil. The members of the GT work under the coordination of the Brazilian Intelligence Agency. The GT comprises representatives from the Institutional Security Office of the Presidency, the Civil Household of the Presidency, the Ministry of Justice – National Office of Public Security and Department of Federal Police –, the Ministry of External Relations – Coordination-General of Combat against Transnational Crime (COCIT) -, the Ministry of Defence – Army, Navy and Air Force Commands – and the Ministry of Finance.

The proposal for the National Policy for Prevention of and Combat against Terrorism shall be guided by the following principles:

- safeguard the national institution and assets and society against terrorism in all its forms;*
- develop a doctrine for combatting terrorism;*
- propose and perfect specific legislation as well as contribute to the implementation of international decisions and documents regarding terrorism and its financing;*
- coordinate the execution of preventive and repressive actions against terrorism; and*
- promote actions to combat terrorism in accordance with the international agreements and initiatives about the subject matter.*

To fully implement the guidelines resulting from these goals, a National Authority for Prevention and Combat to Terrorism (ANPCT) shall be created. The ANPCT will be in charge of planning, coordinating and overseeing the preventive and reactive actions related to terrorist activities.

Control to prevent the supply of weapons to terrorists

1.10 The effective implementation of subparagraph 2 (a) of the Resolution requires States inter alia to eliminate the supply of weapons to terrorists. Brazil indicates in its fourth report (at page 31) that there is no legal impediment to sharing information with foreign counterparts to enable cooperation in dealing with illegal shipments of weapons. The CTC would be grateful to hear of measures in place in Brazil that allows for the exchange of operational information with other neighbouring States, within the framework of bilateral and multilateral cooperation between administrative and security agencies, and in particular with regards to efforts to get rid of small arms and light weapons.

As indicated in the previous report, Brazil has no legal impediments to the sharing with appropriate foreign counterparts of information related to illegal flows of firearms. Brazil cooperates fully with the international community in order to fight this grave problem, especially – albeit not exclusively - by means of a series of multilateral, regional and bilateral initiatives.

Brazil is a Member State of the Inter-American Convention Against The Illicit Manufacturing Of And Trafficking In Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives, And Other Related Materials (also known as CIFTA) since August 1999. The Convention establishes that States-Parties “shall cooperate in the tracing of firearms, ammunition, explosives, and other related materials which may have been illicitly manufactured or trafficked. Such cooperation shall include accurate and prompt responses to trace requests”. CIFTA Members shall also exchange relevant information on matters such as authorized producers, dealers, importers, exporters, and, whenever possible, carriers of firearms, ammunition, explosives, and other related materials. It also contains articles aimed at fostering the exchange of information useful to strengthen national criminal investigation procedures, such as those related to the schemes and tactics routinely used by firearms traffickers.

Moreover, Brazil and Argentina have signed a “Memorandum of Understanding on the Exchange of Information related to Firearms, Ammunitions and Explosives”, which allows for an expedient and thorough flow of information of great use for public security forces of both countries.

Such initiative has been extended to the other members and associated States to the MERCOSUR Bloc, which are currently amidst the process of ratification of a Regional MoU, similar to the one signed by Brazil and Argentina.

In terms of bilateral initiatives, the Bilateral Anti-Narcotics Joint Committees held by Brazil with neighboring countries always include the discussion of measures related to cooperation in the fight against the illicit flow of small arms and light weapons.

1.11 The CTC notes that Brazil enacted Act 10826 of 2003 (page 27 of the fourth report) which lays down strict norms and regulations on registration, acquisition, possession, and commercialization of weapons mainly for individual use. The CTC would be grateful to receive an outline of this Act with particular reference to the provisions that deal with the following:

- * What are the conditions that an applicant for a firearm must meet before a license to purchase a firearm could be issued;
- * How many weapons of a particular type may be licensed to each individual;
- * Does the licensing system allow for the transfer of licenses;
- * How long is a license valid?
- * Is there a mechanism to monitor expiry of the validity and/or the expiry of individual licenses?
- * How is the authenticity or validity of a license to possess a firearm verified?

The conditions for acquisition of a firearm are the following:

- The applicant must declare his/her effective need;
 - He/she must be at least twenty-five years old;
 - The applicant must present an authenticated copy of his/her Identity Card;
 - He/She must prove in the acquisition request and in every renewal of the registration, suitability and inexistence of police inquiry or criminal process, through certificates of criminal antecedents issued by the Federal, State, Military and Electoral Justice;
 - He/She must present document supporting a lawful occupation and accurate residence;
 - He/She must prove, in the acquisition request and in every registration renewal, the technical capacity for firearm handling attested by a shot instruction company duly registered in the Army Command, by an armament and shot instructor from the Armed Forces, Auxiliary Forces or from the board of the Federal Police; and
 - He/She must prove psychological aptitude for firearm handling, attested in conclusive award issued by psychologist of the board of the Federal Police.
- Every person may possess six firearms: two light, two long stripped and two long flat.

- The license to carry a firearm is personal and not transferable.
- The license is valid for three years and must be renewed after this period.
- Yes. It is foreseen a mechanism to monitor the expiry of the validity in the new project of the National System of Weapons - SINARM, created together with SERPRO.

SINARM is a national system interlinked with every institution of the public security in the country, and can be accessed at any locality in Brazil. The safety of the information is credited mainly to the system.
