Afghanistan

UN report on civilian victims

The United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA) published its semi-annual report about the conflict's civilian victims last week. The report says that between 01 January and 30 June 2017 the number of civilian victims was roughly the same as in the reference period 2016. In the first half of 2017 UNAMA registered 5,243 civilians as dead or injured, in the first half of 2016 the number was 5,267 (for the full year 2016: 11,418).

Other than in previous years when ground fighting claimed most casualties, most of the civilians became the victims of bombings and related attacks in the first six months of 2017. Ground fighting was the second most frequent cause.

UNAMA recorded the highest number of civilian victims in the following provinces: Kabul, Helmand, Kandahar, Nangarhar, Uruzgan, Faryab, Herat, Laghman, Kunduz, and Farah. This is the first time that the report includes an annex showing the number of victims in the different provinces.

Armed confrontations

The fighting, purges, and raids by the security forces continue as well as the ambushes and attacks of the insurgents which sometimes also kill or injure civilians. According to media reports the following provinces were affected in the last two weeks: Helmand (south, reportedly government troops reconquered the entire Nawa district and started a coordinated offensive in Greshk district), Zabul, Uruzgan (south), Nangarhar (east, where IS reportedly has occupied 70 % of the area around Tora Bora), Faryab (north), Logar (centre) as well as Ghazni (southeast).

On 20 July 2017 at least six missiles hit Paghman district in Kabul province without causing any damage to people and property. The incident occurred near the residence of the former MP and mujahideen commander Abdul Rab Rasul Sayyaf, who recently strongly criticized the Taliban. In Nangarhar (east) girl lost both legs in the explosion of a roadside bomb.

According to findings of 23 July 2017 it seems that IS evacuated its fighters from the city of Tal Afar. Probably this is a response to higher losses by more precise air strikes in recent weeks. Tal Afar is a dominantly Shia, Turkmen speaking enclave within a dominantly Sunni Arab region.

The metal detector checks that the Palestinians reject, were introduced by Israel on 23 July 2017 after an attack in which three Israeli Arabs shot dead two Israeli policemen at an access gate to the Temple Mount on 21 July 2017. Both were subsequently shot as well. Palestinian representatives had called Muslims to prayers on the Temple Mount on 21 July 2017.

Furthermore the terms "terrorist", „terrorist crimes and units“ as well as „funding terrorism“ are defined. These changes are meant to ameliorate the Gulf crisis.
