Introduction

1. The State of Qatar presented its initial national report at the seventh session of the universal periodic review in February 2010. The report was adopted at the fourteenth session of the Human Rights Council, which made 112 recommendations of which Qatar accepted 87.

2. The second national report completes the plan of action that Qatar began to implement following the discussion and adoption of its initial report, in which it highlighted achievements and initiatives to promote and protect human rights and positive interactions with the relevant international organizations.

3. The present report is committed to respect the outcomes of the initial universal periodic review and, pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution 17/19, it highlights progress made since the submission of the initial report and indicates the efforts made by Qatar to follow up on and implement the recommendations that it accepted, as well as pointing to future challenges and perspectives.

I. Methodology for follow-up to the review and preparation of the report

A. Methodology for follow-up to the review

4. Qatar is willing to implement the commitments arising from the discussion of its initial report and has made every effort to pursue a methodology based on continuity. A standing committee was established to prepare reports for the universal periodic review and to follow-up on the recommendations made following submission of reports. The committee was established by decision of the Council of Ministers at its regular session No. 33 of 24 November 2010 by the authorities that compiled the initial report. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs presides over the committee and its members include the Ministry of the Interior, the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs, the Ministry of Justice, the Consultative Assembly, the Supreme Council for Health, the Ministry of Culture, Arts and Heritage, the Supreme Council for Education, the Supreme Council for Family Affairs, the Qatar Foundation to Combat Human Trafficking and the Qatar Foundation for the Protection of Children and Women. The committee is responsible for the preparation of the second periodic report and for following up on the implementation of the associated recommendations, in addition to the preparation of subsequent reports. The committee compiled and submitted the recommendations to the competent authorities for implementation.

B. Preparation of the report and the consultation process

5. In view of the criteria, bases, objectives and principles of the universal periodic review mechanism as defined by the Human Rights Council, Qatar formulated a plan of action for drafting its second report that included the following elements:

- Presentation of the universal periodic review mechanism and the functions of the national committee to relevant stakeholders, including members of the executive, the legislature and the judiciary, as well as governmental and non-governmental organizations and media institutions working in the field of human rights, in order to involve them in the preparation of the national report by consulting them and considering their views. The committee invited these stakeholders to provide information on human rights in Qatar relating to their spheres of competence;

- Study and analysis by the committee of the human rights information provided and recording of that information in the report in accordance with the criteria and bases of the review;
- Review by the committee of the human rights reports submitted by Qatar to the United Nations treaty bodies in respect of the conventions to which Qatar is a party and review of the resultant recommendations;
- Organization of workshops to offer all stakeholders the opportunity to express their views and observations on the information in the report;
- Launch of the committee's Internet website in order to offer the opportunity to all to express any observations or views on human rights in Qatar;
- Updating of the pamphlet published by the committee in Arabic and English in the context of preparation of the initial report and its distribution to all stakeholders;
- Presentation of the final draft of the second national report to the National Human Rights Committee in order to solicit its views.

II. Developments in the promotion and protection of human rights

A. Legislative developments

6. Since its adoption of the initial report, Qatar has enacted and amended various laws and other legislation in support of human rights, of which the most important are:

- Human Trafficking Act

The Human Trafficking Act (Act No. 15 of 2011) was enacted. The Act, which contains 28 articles, aims to combat human trafficking, to protect victims, whether they be natural or moral persons, and to provide the necessary guarantees for respect of their rights, in addition to providing them with rehabilitation and compensation for material and moral damages sustained at the hands of traffickers.

- Criminal Code

Pursuant to the recommendations of the Committee against Torture, Qatar amended the Criminal Code by the introduction of an explicit definition of torture that is fully consistent with article 1 of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. The objective of making this explicit provision is to strengthen the absolute prohibition of torture as intended in the Qatari Constitution and to clarify the gravity of the offence. Moreover, it demonstrates the support of Qatar for a total ban on torture under any circumstances. The provision was included in Act No. 8 of 2010 amending the Criminal Code, promulgated by Act No. 11 of 2004.

- Health and Education Fund Act

Act No. 6 of 2013 on the Health and Education Fund was enacted. The Act, which contains 30 articles, aims to provide sustainable financial resources to support health and education services and authorities, consistent with the higher interests of the State, in addition to providing support in cases of emergency.

- Health and Social Security Act

The Health and Social Security Act (Act No. 7 of 2013) was enacted. The Act, which contains 30 articles, aims to make the health insurance system compulsory in order to ensure the provision of basic health services to all Qatari citizens, citizens of Gulf Cooperation Council States and residents and visitors to the country.

B. Institutional developments

It provides training to its staff on dealing with civil society institutions and issues periodicals, pamphlets and manuals on the achievement of the Foundation's goals. In addition, it is responsible for the establishment of standing and ad hoc committees; enlisting the support and specialist knowledge of experts at home and abroad; working to achieve the goals set out in international instruments relating to social action through civil society institutions; following up on all efforts by civil society institutions to implement the international conventions and instruments relevant to its aims; and convening conferences and courses on topics related to the Foundation's goals.

11. A Climate Change and Clean Development Committee was established and its sphere of competence defined pursuant to Council of Ministers decision No. 15 of 2011. The Committee aims to follow up on the meetings of States parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, the Kyoto Protocol and the recommendations made at those meetings; to propose the necessary national policies and plans of action with regard to the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions in Qatar in order to ensure that government and non-governmental agencies in Qatar abide by the obligations established under the Convention and its Protocol and to prepare the necessary studies and reports in this connection; to contribute to the preparation of national periodic reports; to propose a clean development mechanism strategy; and to participate in local, regional and international activities relevant to the work of the Committee.

The Committee seeks to establish close cooperation between races, religions and cultures.

National Road Safety Committee

14. Qatar attaches great importance to transport, which is fundamental to the achievement of sustainable human development. This concern is manifest in the issuance of Council of Ministers decision No. 33 of 2010 on the establishment of the National Road Safety Committee, members of which are drawn from the Ministry of the Interior and the responsible national authorities, to assume responsibility for drafting road safety policies.

C. Developments in policy and strategy

1. Human rights from a development planning and strategy perspective

15. Qatar has given increasing attention to human rights since submitting its initial report. It has taken numerous legislative, legal, administrative and other measures to realize human rights and to provide sufficient means to establish, develop and update them in a context of integrated social development. This attention has been linked to national points of reference, principally the Qatar National Vision 2030 and the National Development Strategy 2011–2016, in addition to other sectoral strategies. These points of reference form an established supporting environment for the realization of the human rights contained in international instruments. Qatar has adopted the National Vision as well as a number of strategies, as described below.

Qatar National Vision 2030

16. The National Vision aims to transform Qatar into an advanced society capable of achieving sustainable development and of ensuring and maintaining living standards for its people, from generation to generation, by 2030. This vision involves key issues relating to rights in the areas of education, health and environment, in addition to the rights of migrant workers, the empowerment of women and the rights of the child.

Family Cohesion and Empowerment of Women Strategy 2011–2016

20. This strategy is one of the 14 component sectoral strategies of the National Development Strategy and comes under the umbrella of social development. Responsibility for the launch and follow-up to this strategy has been assigned to the Supreme Council for Family Affairs, in coordination with founding partners. The three main themes of the strategy are family cohesion, family welfare and the empowerment of women.

National Health Strategy 2011–2016

21. The National Health Strategy aims to introduce changes to the health-care system and to provide effective and affordable world-class comprehensive health care for all, taking into account the different needs of men, women and children. The strategy includes 35 projects.

National Primary Healthcare Strategy 2013–2018

22. The National Primary Healthcare Strategy aims to confront and tackle the health challenges of the future through the achievement of eight goals, namely: improving health, diagnosis, emergency care, chronic non-communicable diseases, home care, mental health, mother and newborn care, child and adolescent health.

Education and Training Strategy 2011–2016

23. The Education and Training Strategy aims to establish an education system on a par with world-class education systems that will meet the needs of Qatari citizens and society through the provision of educational curricula and training programmes that meet the current and future needs of the labour market, high-quality educational and training opportunities suited to the aspirations and capacities of every individual and life-long continuing education programmes for all. It also aims to create a national formal and informal education network that will equip Qatari children and youth with the skills and high motivation needed for them to contribute to the construction and advancement of their society, by: strengthening national values and traditions and preserving the national heritage; encouraging young people to create, innovate and develop their capacities; fostering a spirit of belonging and citizenship; promoting participation in a wide range of sporting and cultural activities. Moreover, the strategy seeks to provide advanced, independent educational institutions that manage their affairs efficiently in accordance with centralized guidelines and are accountable, in addition to an effective system for funding scientific research based on the principle of public-private sector partnership in cooperation with the relevant international bodies and leading international research centres, as well as seeking to establish an active role for Qatar in international cultural and intellectual activities and scientific research.

2. National Plan to Combat Human Trafficking

24. The National Plan to Combat Human Trafficking aims to prevent human trafficking and to ensure that victims receive protection, care and support, through national, regional and international cooperation on training and capacity-building for personnel working in the field of law enforcement.

Strategic Plan of the National Human Rights Committee 2011–2014

25. The Strategic Plan of the National Human Rights Committee aims to promote and disseminate a culture of human rights in Qatar by raising awareness and providing training on human rights to different groups. It also aims to provide protection and assistance to victims, to strengthen Arab, regional and international cooperation with regard to human rights, to build the capacities of civil society institutions, to encourage Qatar to accede to international conventions and to strengthen national legislation. Moreover, it aims to promote human rights education and advance human rights.

National Road Safety Strategy 2013–2022

26. The National Road Safety Strategy was introduced in Qatar with a view to reducing the number of victims of road traffic accidents and the resultant annual toll of deaths and severe injuries, as a step towards achieving the long-term vision for road safety.¹

D. Developments in awareness-raising

27. The Supreme Education Council attaches considerable importance to the promotion of a culture of human rights, in the context of national efforts to promote and disseminate human rights. It has introduced a number of initiatives, including by:

- Creating human rights groups in educational establishments and preparing teachers to contribute to disseminating a culture of human rights;
- Designating a human rights day in schools and organizing competitions on the rights of the child — “Know Your Rights” — in coordination with the National Human Rights Committee;
- Developing a set of guidelines to ensure that human rights are incorporated in educational programmes.

28. The Ministry of the Interior has organized high-quality, specialized training workshops on human rights topics and prepared training packages for Ministry departments for the past three years (2010–2012), as part of continuing efforts to provide training to law enforcement personnel on human rights. The Human Rights Department supports the human rights training offered by the Police Training Institute by organizing specialized courses.

29. In the same context, the Centre of Legal and Judicial Studies in the Ministry of Justice teaches human rights and international humanitarian law as part of all mandatory courses for judges, prosecutors, jurists and lawyers. The Centre also holds training workshops for military and civilian law enforcement personnel and authorities on the application of the rules of international human rights law and international humanitarian law.

30. Qatar continues its efforts to promote and protect the rights of migrant workers. In this context, the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs has established an advisory and guidance team, which is responsible for:

- Educating workers about their rights and duties as established by law;
- Familiarizing workers with the provisions of the Labour Code and its implementing decisions;
- Raising awareness of occupational health and safety requirements during field visits to construction sites and administrative and residential places of work;

- Providing advice on employment contracts and responding to any inquiries;
- Tackling outstanding problems between workers and employers;
- Distributing brochures, pamphlets and publications to workers informing them of their rights and duties and of occupational health and safety requirements.

31. Moreover, the National Human Rights Committee makes vigorous efforts to publish and disseminate the Declaration on Human Rights Defenders. These efforts include the Conference to Protect Journalists and the associated workshops and recommendations, and the Martyr Ali Hassan Al Jaber Award. In addition, the Committee has prepared teaching manuals for the incorporation of human rights in academic curricula at all levels of education and has developed the “My rights as a child” programme, which is implemented at a number of independent and private schools.

32. As part of outreach activities to protect women and children, the Qatar Foundation for the Protection of Women and Children has continued to combat discrimination against women by promoting a culture of women’s rights and equality of opportunity. It has done so through a number of programmes, including by:

- Preparing, publishing and distributing brochures and leaflets on the promotion of a culture that protects women’s rights;
- Holding seminars, workshops and conducting campaigns to combat sexual violence against women and to raise the awareness of women and society in order to address and tackle anomalous practices, in addition to developing the legal and procedural systems in order to ensure that women enjoy comprehensive, integrated protection.

33. Qatar has continued to combat human trafficking. In this context, the Qatar Foundation to Combat Human Trafficking has conducted the following activities:

- Organization of awareness campaigns for school students, administrative staff, teachers and domestic and migrant workers on the crime of human trafficking and its impact on the community;
- Organization of workshops in cooperation with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime for a number of national law enforcement personnel aimed at enhancing participants’ awareness of the scale of human trafficking, means of combating it and how to identify and protect victims;
- Establishment of the Social Legal Clinic, a practical educational training programme conducted by the Foundation in cooperation with universities and educational institutions involved in combating human trafficking, through training students and researchers in voluntary work.

E. Developments in international cooperation

34. Qatar attaches great importance to international cooperation and deploys human and financial resources in this field. It is a member of 328 regional and global organizations and bodies. Moreover, it has 90 diplomatic missions around the world to ensure that coordination is fruitful, that the goals of international cooperation are achieved in order to promote and develop human rights.

35. On this basis, Qatar has taken the initiative of offering assistance for development to developing countries around the world. In 2011 and 2012, Qatar provided humanitarian and development assistance (governmental and non-governmental) amounting to 3,001,764,025

Qatar riyals (QR). Assistance was provided to 100 countries in different parts of the world, in particular least developed countries, to help them to achieve the Millennium Development Goals by 2015. In 2012, assistance accounted for 0.43 per cent of the country's gross domestic product.

36. The contribution made by Qatar is not limited to the provision of humanitarian and development aid but extends to include the undertaking of humanitarian and development initiatives at the international level. Qatar has undertaken a number of initiatives, including, by way of example:

- “Hope For”, an initiative launched in New York in June 2010 to improve the effectiveness and coordination of military and civil defences in response to natural disasters;
- “Dry Land” and “Education Above All”, initiatives developed during 2010–2011 based on the belief of Qatar in the importance and necessity of confronting humanitarian and development challenges and of working on providing sustainable solutions to those challenges;
- “Protecting Education in Insecurity and Armed Conflict”, an international initiative (formerly Education Above All) in 2008 to protect, support and promote the right to education in crisis, conflict and war zones or zones threatened by crisis, conflict and war;
- Al-Fakhurah, an initiative launched in 2009 to support and protect students and schools in conflict zones around the world and, in particular, in Gaza;
- “Teach a Child”, a global initiative to reduce the number of children who lose the right to education all over the world as a result of conflicts, wars and natural disasters, as well as those living in poor areas in cities or in remote rural areas and groups that may face particular challenges in access to education, such as girls, persons with disabilities and minorities;
- Establishment of the Qatari-Mauritanian Institution for Social Development in Mauritania. Project activities include programmes to eradicate illiteracy, among children in particular, through teaching, rehabilitation and the establishment of microfoundations to assist them;
- Establishment of the Qatar Development Fund, which aims to assist Arab and other developing countries develop their economies and implement development programmes.

37. In the context of bilateral relations and international cooperation, in March 2010 Doha hosted a donor conference on investment and development in the Comoros, in cooperation with the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, at which Qatar pledged to provide QR 73 million following the earthquake that struck Haiti in 2010 and established a special Fund for the Reconstruction of Haiti for that purpose. In the same context, Qatar made a donation to Japan in the wake of the tsunami and established the Qatar Friendship Fund in cooperation with the Government of Japan in order to contribute to reconstruction efforts in the affected areas.

38. Qatar has continued to support international organizations and various United Nations agencies, in addition to making an annual contribution of US$ 100,000 to the core resources of the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF).

III. Implementation of the recommendations accepted by Qatar

A. Accession to international treaties

39. Qatar has the political will to accede to numerous international treaties, which it believes to be important for the promotion and protection of human rights. Qatar has signed and ratified a number of international and regional human rights conventions in recent years, with a view to promoting and strengthening the legislative framework for human rights; its accession to a number of instruments in a short period of time has placed pressure on the national legislative authorities and increased their workload. In addition, Qatar has formed a committee to consider accession to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights.

B. Strengthening of international cooperation

40. Qatar's efforts to contribute effectively to international moves to promote and protect human rights flow from the principles enshrined in the national Constitution and, in particular, from Qatar's commitment to respect international instruments and covenants and endeavour to implement all the international agreements to which it is a party. The Constitution requires foreign policy to be guided by the principles of consolidating international peace and security, respect for human rights, renunciation of violence and the use of force, encouraging the peaceful settlement of international disputes and cooperation with peace-loving nations. In this context, Qatar has taken serious steps to implement the recommendations of the Working Group since February 2010 at the national and at the international level in order to promote human rights, based on its enduring desire to improve the human rights situation in Qatar and to strengthen constructive cooperation with the relevant special procedures. This was confirmed when Qatar accepted the recommendation to extend an open and standing invitation to special procedures mandate holders. Qatar received a visit from the Special Rapporteur on the human rights of migrants in November 2013. Moreover, in January 2014 Qatar welcomed the visit of the Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers. In addition, it has received visits from numerous non-governmental organizations dealing with human rights, such as Human Rights Watch in 2012 and Amnesty International and the International Trade Union Confederation in 2013. Furthermore, in January/February 2011 Qatar hosted regional stakeholder consultations held by the Independent expert on the effects of foreign debt.

41. Qatar has continued to implement a policy of openness towards hosting global forums and conferences on development, democracy, human rights and promoting a culture of peace. Every year, it hosts the Conference for Interfaith Dialogue, as well as the U.S.-Islamic World Forum. Moreover, the Fourth Global United Nations Alliance of Civilizations Forum 2011 was held in Qatar. In addition, Qatar hosted numerous conferences on international trade and supported aid for trade, as well as the Follow-up International Conference on Financing for Development to Review the Implementation of the Monterrey Consensus, the international Climate Change Conference, the [thirteenth session of the] United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), and other international conferences that seek to highlight the importance of supporting international development efforts, in particular for countries of the South.

42. In this connection, Qatar is engaged in numerous activities to support development in countries of the South, and provides foreign aid and assistance to several countries in Africa and Asia in the context of bilateral cooperation or through multilateral channels. This assistance forms a significant part of Qatar's foreign aid programme.² Qatar has launched a number of initiatives to promote security and stability in these areas. For example, after signing the Doha Document for Peace in Darfur it made efforts to restore peace in the area through a humanitarian programme for the return of internally displaced and exiled persons. In addition, in cooperation with the United Nations and relevant international organizations, Qatar has held a number of donor conferences such as the conference for Niger during the drought crisis, the donor conference for development and investment in the Comoros and the donor conference for Darfur. Qatari humanitarian organizations play an important role in supporting development in the countries of the South through partnerships with government and non-governmental institutions, in cooperation with international organizations in this field.

43. Qatar has undertaken to submit all of its reports to the international and regional treaty bodies and to engage in dialogue in that connection.³ In addition, it strives to implement the recommendations of the various treaty bodies. It has withdrawn its reservations to articles 21 and 22 of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and has amended its general reservation to the Convention, linking it to articles 1 and 16.

44. In the context of cooperation with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Qatar continues to support the United Nations Human Rights Training and Documentation Centre for South-West Asia and the Arab region.

45. In the context of experience sharing with countries interested in combating corruption, as indicated above in the section on institutional developments, the Government established the Administrative Control and Transparency Authority.⁴ It should also be noted at this juncture that the State Public Prosecutor has been selected to assume the post of United Nations Special Advocate for Stolen Asset Recovery for the Arab Spring countries.

46. The organization Reach Out to Asia (ROTA) currently plans to expand its activities to five countries by the end of 2014, namely, Tunisia, Egypt, the occupied Palestinian territories (West Bank), Yemen and Myanmar. It should be noted that the organization was established in 2005 and operates under the umbrella of the Qatar Foundation for Education, Science and Community Development. Its programme includes two main programmes. The activities of the first programme, Qatar ROTA, are conducted in Qatar, while those of the other programmes are conducted in Asia and the Middle East. The organization has made significant achievements in a number of countries around the world with regard to fundraising, the provision of relief to areas affected by natural disasters, the reconstruction and equipping of schools and the organization of campaigns to encourage Qatari schoolchildren to donate to the children of the world.

47. Qatar has taken the following measures in connection with the exchange of best practices to improve the education of children with disabilities:

- Signature of a memorandum of understanding between the Supreme Council for Education, the Supreme Council for Health and the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs on meeting the needs of students with disabilities. The implementation of the memorandum has produced a number of results, principally:
 - Achievement of an academic integration programme for children with disabilities;
 - Dissemination of the Convention on the Rights of the Child in schools;
 - Coordination with the University of Qatar to establish a degree programme in special education and a degree programme in early childhood care.

C. Measures, strategies and policies for the promotion and protection of human rights

Gender equality

48. The Constitution of Qatar reaffirms the principle of equality before the law in rights and duties for all citizens, regardless of their sex. Women are thus guaranteed protection against all forms of discrimination and so have the same opportunities to develop their capacities, protect and promote their rights and take a positive part in social development. Non-discrimination is enshrined as a general and binding principle in the Constitution. Article 34 provides that: "All citizens are equal in rights and duties". This refers to all groups in Qatari society, including men, women and children; the word "citizen" is general and applies to both men and women, without discrimination. National legislation enacted in recent years, in particular since the entry into force of the Permanent Constitution in 2004, seeks to strengthen women's rights, to eliminate discrimination between men and women and to lay the foundations for gender equality in all fields. Generic forms are used in the national legislation when stipulating rights or determining obligations, such that no distinction is made between men and women and it is clear that the provisions refer to both men and women equally, unless clearly specified otherwise. The following are examples of legal provisions that have been revoked or amended for being discriminatory against women:

- Under Act No. 19 of 2008, the blood money payable for the wrongful killing of a woman is equal to that payable for a man. Prior to the enactment of this law, the amount payable for a woman was half of that payable for a man;
- Act No. 8 of 2009 on the management of human resources abolished the exclusion of women from access to housing allowance on an equal basis with men;
- Act No. 5 of 2009 amending the Passports Act (Act No. 14 of 1993) abolished the requirement for the consent of a guardian for the issuance of a passport to a woman. The consent of a guardian is required only in the case of persons with diminished or no legal capacity;
- Act No. 2 of 2007 on the housing system gives citizens of both sexes access to the housing system. Council of Ministers Decree No. 17/2007 on priorities and conditions for housing eligibility grants unmarried citizens of both sexes who are heads of households, regardless of whether they have reached 35 years of age, the right to benefit from the housing system, whereas that right was formerly limited to men;

- Legislative Decree No. 19/2007 promulgating the Traffic Act, under which men and women are subject to the same requirements in order to obtain a driving licence.

Strengthening and advancing the role of women in society

49. In the context of its efforts to achieve social development, Qatar is committed to maintaining the family as a strong and cohesive unit and to providing the family with support, welfare and protection. Qatar's experience with regard to the advancement of women is distinctive in that it adopts a holistic approach to issues affecting women, based on the deep conviction that it is counterproductive to separate women's issues from family and social issues. Women are members of families; when their situation is improved, that of all members of the family in terms of education, health, economic status and culture is necessarily improved. The advancement of women is linked to advancements in health, education and the economic sector. Consequently, all plans to develop those sectors aim explicitly to strengthen the services provided to women and enhance their participation in those sectors at all levels. The Qatar National Vision 2030 reaffirms the need to strengthen women's capacities and to empower them to participate in political and economic life and, in particular, in decision-making. The specific goals of the national population policy include the empowerment of women and the promotion of gender equity and justice and the executive plan includes specific executive programmes for the achievement of those goals.

50. The establishment of the Supreme Council for Family Affairs represents an important shift in concern for the family in general and for women in particular. Whereas previously women's issues were considered only in terms of welfare and protection, since the establishment of the Council the concepts of women's empowerment and participation have emerged for the first time in dealing with those issues in Qatari society. The Council has played a key role in developing legislation relating to women including, for example, by contributing to the drafting of the Family Code, setting the minimum age for marriage, establishing the premarital medical examination policy, establishing the age to which mothers have custody of children as 13 years for boys and 15 years for girls, contributing to the drafting of the Housing Act and establishing the right of women to access the housing system. In addition, the Council has adopted a human rights perspective in dealing with issues relating to women, children, persons with disabilities and the elderly. It has contributed to spreading awareness of women's rights and issues through the implementation of numerous training courses, workshops, discussion panels and seminars and has contributed to strengthening scientific research on women's issues through conducting and publishing studies and research.⁵

Securing political and civil rights for women

51. The Constitution of Qatar guarantees equality between men and women with regard to participation in social life and, in particular, the right of women to vote and stand for election in all elections and referendums, to participate in policy formulation, to hold public office at all levels and to participate in organizations and associations concerned with the country's public and political life.

The course that has been taken in recent years has demonstrated clearly that the political will to empower Qatari women and enhancing their participation in government at the decision-making level exists. This will is manifest in the fact that a number of women have been appointed to decision-making positions in Qatar, including the first woman Minister of Education and Higher Education from 2003 to 2009 and the Minister of Health from 2008 to 2009. Qatari women currently occupy senior leadership positions, such as the Chairperson of the Qatar Foundation for Education, Science and Community Development, the Chairperson of the Supreme Council for Family Affairs, the Chairperson of the Trustees of the Qatar Museums Authority, the Deputy Chairperson of the Supreme Council for Health, the Deputy Chairperson of the Supreme Council for Education, the President of Qatar University and the Minister of Communications and Information Technology. Moreover, numerous women participated in the decision-making bodies of supreme councils and government institutions and bodies and served as members of policy- and strategy-making standing committees such as the Standing Committee on Population, in addition to ad hoc committees responsible for formulating legislation in various areas. In addition, they participate in the formulation and implementation of government policy and their participation has been strengthened by their appointment to numerous diplomatic posts.

Since the first round of Municipal Council elections in 1999 and up to the 2011 elections, Qatari women have participated vigorously as voters and as candidates. Recently, it has been noted that a number of women have joined the boards of publicly traded companies, in some cases as chairpersons. In a similar vein, women are participating more actively in the elections of the board of the Qatar Chamber of Commerce and Industry; the list of candidates includes four women entrepreneurs, for the first time in its history.

52. The Human Resources Management Act provides that in addition to maternity leave, a female employee may be granted two hours of breastfeeding leave a day for one year, starting from the end of maternity leave, the times to be determined by the employee (art. 109). Moreover, the Act provides that a female Qatari employee may be granted leave to care for her children with disabilities under the age of 6 years twice during her working life for up to three years on every occasion and that the Prime Minister may, without prejudice to the public interest, grant female Qatari employees leave to care for their children in cases he deems deserving. In all cases, leave pay in the first three years is the gross salary and half of the gross salary thereafter (art. 110). The act also provides that a Muslim female employee whose spouse dies shall be granted leave for the legally prescribed waiting period ('iddah) of 4 months and 10 days on full pay from the date of the spouse's death or until she gives birth if she is pregnant, such leave not being deductible from her other leaves (art. 113).

53. Part Ten of the Labour Code (Act No. 14 of 2004), in articles 93–98, guarantees working women equal pay to men for equal work, equal opportunities for training and promotion as men, the right to maternity leave and breastfeeding leave for one hour a day for one year. Moreover, it provides that an employment contract may not be terminated due to the marriage of an employee or to her obtaining maternity leave and that an employer may not notify an employee of the termination of her employment contract during such leave.

54. Act No. 10 of 2003 on the judiciary does not discriminate between men and women with regard to judicial appointments. The first female judge was appointed to the Court of First Instance by an Amiri Decree issued in November 2010. In March of the same year, a woman was appointed as a judicial assistant.

55. Moreover, the Ministry of the Interior established the Committee for Women's Affairs by Ministerial decision No. 31 of 2010. The Committee is responsible for monitoring the situation of women in the Ministry and for the implementation of related public policies, for studying issues affecting women, for coordination with various governmental and non-governmental bodies with a view to achieving the objectives of the Qatar National Vision 2030, representing the Ministry at events and conferences, participating in the preparation of the Ministry's strategy for women and giving impetus to dialogue and communication with the agencies responsible for women's issues.

Strengthening the juvenile justice system

56. In accordance with the Juveniles Act (Act No. 1 of 1994), the Department of Social Protection is responsible for the care and protection of minors (juveniles) through specialized social workers and psychologists. Closed sessions of the Juvenile Court are held in the Department, attended by the case social worker and the minor's guardian or lawyer.⁶ A lawyer is required to attend with a minor in cases involving serious offences. In cases where a minor's guardian is not in a financial position to appoint a lawyer, the court may do so at the court's expense.

Judges sentence juveniles to imprisonment only in very few cases, such as those involving serious offences (abduction, rape) in view of the impact of such incidents on the rights of victims.

57. The juvenile justice system takes care to allocate dedicated services for juveniles and facilities equipped to ensure the welfare of juveniles who are serving sentences by separating them from older prisoners. Juveniles may not be sentenced to death. Juveniles sentenced to imprisonment may be released early for good behaviour, since the sentencing of juveniles is based on flexible judicial measures. The courts impose custodial sentences on juveniles on a minimal basis and, when they do, take care to ensure that they are served in or close to the juvenile's family milieu.

The Department of Social Protection is responsible for monitoring minors sentenced by the Juvenile Court judge to meet certain obligations and may do so over a number of months, in cooperation with other public bodies (the Ministry of Youth and Sports, the Ministry of Culture, Arts and Heritage and the Ministry of Religious Endowments and Islamic Affairs, in addition to charitable associations) in order to determine whether the behaviour concerned has been corrected.⁷

- (ج) الإلحاق بالتدريب المهني؛

58. In accordance with article 14 of the Juveniles Act, when a minor is admitted to a specialized reform centre for the welfare and correction of juveniles, the centre is required to submit biannual reports to the court on the juvenile's situation and behaviour so that the court may determine the appropriate action. A juvenile may not be placed in such a facility for more than 10 years for serious offences and 5 years for lesser offences. Juveniles with disabilities are admitted to an appropriate institution for their rehabilitation. Minors may only remain in reform centres until the age of 18 years, whereupon they are transferred to prison to serve their sentences.

59. With regard to the separation of juveniles from adults, Act No. 3 of 2009 regulating penitentiary and reform institutions requires adult prisoners to be separated from prisoners under the age of 18 years. Article 5 requires specific areas to be allocated to juveniles in prisons and reform institutions, while article 24 classifies prisoners into categories, divided into age groups. The competent authorities are responsible for the protection and for the physical and psychological integrity of prisoners, for their educational, health and social welfare and for establishing the appropriate conditions for their rehabilitation and reintegration into society, taking into account their needs, their human dignity, their age and their sex. In addition, they are responsible for ensuring the safe return of prisoners, in cooperation with their countries of origin or the authorities of the countries of which they are permanent residents. It should be noted that the Qatar Foundation for the Protection of Women and Children has conducted a number of skills training courses for security sector personnel (officers and investigators) of various ranks on dealing with cases of abuse and violence against children or women.

Strengthening the family

60. Qatar has continued its efforts to strengthen the family and family values and has taken numerous steps and measures to strengthen the family and family values since the issuance of Amiri Decree No. 53 of 1998, which reflects the Government's concern from an early stage to establish a supreme national authority responsible for the family and its future needs and aspirations. This concern was given substance by Amiri Decree No. 15 of 2009 on the organization of the Supreme Council for Family Affairs, in accordance with the overall vision for development contained in the Qatar National Vision 2030, which stipulates that the Council shall report directly to the Amir. As the supreme authority responsible for all matters relating to the family, the Council aims to enhance the status and strengthen the role of the family in society, to promote the family and family members, to ensure that the family remains a strong and cohesive unit that cares for children and upholds moral and religious values and ideals. In order to do so, it has at its disposal all the necessary powers and authority to develop strategies, policies and programmes for improving the quality of life for the family and family members, ensuring that they have social security and stability. Moreover, the Council seeks to achieve the goals set out in international instruments that deal with family matters. It follows up on the implementation of international conventions concerned with family matters and the rights of children, women, and persons with disabilities to which Qatar is a party and consults on draft agreements on the protection of the family and family members. It endeavours to empower women, to enable them to participate in economic and political life, particularly in decision-making, to increase employment opportunities for them and to support them in their professional lives. It proposes draft legislative tools relevant to the family and its members. In addition, the Council cooperates with international and regional bodies and organizations concerned with family and its members and represents Qatar in regional and international conferences and committees on the family, children, women and persons with disabilities. Moreover, it holds conferences, seminars and panel discussions and conducts research on topics pertaining to the family.

The Council attaches considerable importance to coordination and cooperation with all government agencies and to the support and participation of civil society organizations. It gives particular attention to volunteer work and encourages the participation of the private sector, with effective contribution from target groups, namely, the family, children, women, youth, persons with disabilities and the elderly.

61. The Supreme Council for Family Affairs has taken a number of measures in the context of Qatar's national obligations under the international human rights conventions to which it is a party. Since the submission of the initial report, the Council has established a number of institutions for the family, children, women, persons with disabilities and the elderly and has implemented numerous activities and programmes including, by way of example, the following:

- Implementation by the Council of an annual programme bringing together experts and others concerned with issues related to the family at which the problems and challenges facing the family in Qatar are addressed. The first meeting, entitled "Curbing divorce in Qatar: policy proposals", was held in April 2011 and was followed by the second meeting of experts, entitled "Family counselling services in Qatar: challenges and goals", in April 2012. The third meeting, entitled "Towards achieving work-life balance for women", was held in April 2013;
- Celebration of National Family Day on 15 April every year, as established by the Council of Ministers at its first ordinary session on 5 January 2011. Numerous meetings and seminars are held to mark the day at which issues pertaining to the family and family counselling services are discussed, in addition to social phenomena relating to the family;
- Preparation of a Family Database Indicators Manual for 2009, with a view to establishing a scientific, statistical point of reference for all data users, decision makers and policymakers to enable them to recognize the importance of indicators, the contexts in which they are used and how to utilize them in studies and research and monitor progress in categories of interest;
- Preparation of a guide for welfare and protection service providers in order to enhance the role of the family, to protect the family and to empower individual family members by means of access to those services, and also to enhance the role of service providers by highlighting the services and the activities that they offer;
- Publication in 2013 by the Supreme Council for Family Affairs, in cooperation with the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs, the Family Counselling Centre, the Qatari Foundation for the Protection of Women and Children (Al-Aman), the Social Rehabilitation Centre (Al-Uwayn), the Qatari Foundation for the Elderly (Al-Ihsan), the Shafallah Centre for Children with Special Needs and the Cultural Centre for Childhood of a report, entitled "The family from the perspective of social protection and welfare institutions". The report reviews and assesses the situation of families in particular circumstances (such as families caring for the elderly or the young or for persons with disabilities, low-income families, family members from broken homes and victims of domestic violence) and other categories targeted by welfare and social protection programmes in terms of the services provided to them. In addition, the report highlights the need to develop policies, to lobby and to develop relevant statistics and indicators to keep pace with policymaking and planning needs. The report is aimed at decision makers and programme planners working in government agencies, civil society institutions, universities and scientific research centres, regional and international organizations, the media and interested members of the community.

62. With regard to national strategies, the Qatar National Vision 2030 includes the following social pillars:

- Family cohesion

The Qatar National Vision 2030 aims to build a society that promotes justice and equality. It embodies the principles enshrined in the permanent Constitution, which protects public and private freedoms, promotes moral and religious values as well as customs, traditions and cultural identity and guarantees security, stability and equality of opportunity.⁸

- Sectoral strategy to promote family cohesion and the empowerment of women

This strategy, which forms part of the National Development Strategy 2011–2016, identifies eight development objectives in three principal thematic areas, namely, family cohesion, welfare and the empowerment of women, as a means of achieving the objectives of the Qatar National Vision 2030. The desired results will be achieved through 12 linked projects.⁹

In connection with the implementation of the recommendations of the Committee on the Rights of the Child contained in paragraph 65 of document CRC/C/QAT/CO/12, the Supreme Council for Family Affairs, as the supreme authority responsible for issues relating to the family, including child welfare, and everything relating to the coordination of efforts with regard to development policies, measures and programmes relating to children's rights, is also responsible for follow up to the concluding observations of the Committee on the Rights of the Child.

In cooperation with the competent authorities, the Council endeavours to respond fully to the observations made by the Committee in national strategies and plans relating to children. Moreover, it publishes the national reports that it submits to the Committee as well as the Committee's concluding observations on its website and disseminates the latter to the national authorities responsible for children so that they can implement the Committee's recommendations in their annual programmes and activities.

The competent committee has reviewed the Children's Bill and the legislative steps established by law are currently being taken with a view to its enactment. The bill offers greater protection to children as it provides for the establishment of a special juvenile police force and a juvenile prosecution service, in addition to a juvenile court of first instance and a juvenile court of appeal.

64. Policies and training programmes relating to the promotion and protection of the rights of the child continue to be improved. In addition to the developments in awareness-raising reviewed above, the Government has taken various measures relating to the child, including, for example, by establishing a unit that deals with the rights of children, women and persons with disabilities in the National Human Rights Committee, pursuant to the Chairperson's decision No. 16 of 2010 on the establishment of legal units within the Committee. The unit is responsible for examining reports and complaints and appeals relating to violence against women, the rights of the child and the disability rights.

At the Arab level, Qatar, represented by the Supreme Council for Family Affairs, hosted the seventeenth session of the Arab Childhood Committee from 24 to 27 October 2011. During the course of the session, issues relating to children in the Arab world were discussed, in addition to their connection with international conventions and the protection strategies and mechanisms required for children in the Arab States.

65. The Supreme Council for Family Affairs has taken the lead in raising awareness of children's rights and has contributed to raising awareness of the third Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on a communications procedure. Moreover, celebrations are held every year to mark international and regional children's days, such as Arab Children's Day and International Children's Day.

The national strategy for family cohesion includes a project entitled "Development of measures to promote children's rights and protect children's interests".¹⁰

Action against domestic violence

66. In the context of strengthening the legal measures aimed at combating domestic violence, sexual assault and the exploitation of women and children and ensuring that those measures are implemented effectively, Qatar has adopted various legislative, policy and strategic measures and steps, including:

- With regard to legislation, for example, the Criminal Code and the legislation amending the Code contain penalties for offences that fall within the category of violence against women and children, including offences against honour, indecent acts and indecent assault, acts harmful to children, murder, abuse, abortion and abduction;
- The Human Trafficking Act includes harsh penalties for forms of human trafficking of which the victims are women and children, as these offences involve the most serious forms of violence against women and children such as the use of means of coercion or threat to exploit women and children in prostitution or forced labour;
- In the context of the legislative review, the Supreme Council for Family Affairs established a committee, chaired by the Council and with members drawn from the competent national authorities, to review the national legislation on domestic violence;
- Moreover the Supreme Council for Family Affairs established and presides over a team, whose members are drawn from other competent authorities, which is responsible for developing statistics on domestic violence;
- Strategies and national plans have included goals to strengthen services provided to the family, women and children with a view to protecting them against violence. The Strategic Plan for the Family 2011–2016 includes a goal relating to the protection of women from all forms of exploitation and violence, and the strategic implementation plan that was adopted includes a series of specific programmes and measures for the implementation of that goal through government and non-governmental agencies.¹¹

67. The Supreme Council for Family Affairs and its strategic partners have followed up on these measures by stepping up efforts to strengthen cooperation and partnership in order to boost the strategic implementation plan, and by creating strong links between the Council's programmes and projects and components of the family cohesion and empowerment of women 2011–2016 sector under the aforementioned National Development Strategy 2011–2016. In addition, the Council has established projects and activities on protection against domestic violence, victim protection mechanisms and a project to develop an early detection mechanism for use in schools with a view to protecting children from violence. Moreover, it has established a project to develop measures to promote children's rights and protect their interests. The Council prepares and issues periodic reports on monitoring and follow-up to the implementation of activities and the outcomes of the implementation plan for the sector in the context of the National Development Strategy 2011–2016, including outcomes relating to children's and women's rights.

68. With regard to violence in schools, the Supreme Education Council has endeavoured to provide all precautions and measures to ensure the security and safety of students, at home and at school. To that end, it has provided a number of training courses for social workers and psychologists in coordination with the competent authorities, such as the Department of Social Protection in the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs, the Qatar Foundation for the Protection of Women and Children, the Social Rehabilitation Centre (Al-Uwayn) and the Family Counselling Centre, on proper methods of detection and how to tackle and report on cases of violence in schools. Since 2009, a number of training courses have been provided, initially by support institutions under contract to the Council and subsequently by independent schools, in accordance with the approved plan for development. The Higher Education Council continues its efforts to promote the best measures.

69. In addition, a programme to disseminate a culture of children's rights has been implemented at various stages of education with a view to raising awareness of children's rights and providing protection against violence between students in schools, encouraging them to assume a role in mitigating the negative impacts and consequences of violence and abuse in their community. At the same time, the programme seeks to empower teaching staff to detect forms of abuse and delinquency by raising the awareness and upgrading the skills of social workers and teachers to deal with cases of violence and abuse against children. The programme has included field visits to independent, private and community schools and consists of lectures on various aspects of protection (social, health, psychological and legal) and on reporting and complaints mechanisms for violations.

70. In addition, the Juvenile Police Department in the Ministry of the Interior, in coordination with government agencies and civil society organizations, has developed a strategy to protect children from harmful information and material such as violence and pornography. It issues posters, educational brochures and pamphlets on this topic, with a view to protecting children. Moreover, it conducts field studies in order to identify the

With regard to awareness-raising programmes and activities for parents on methods of educating and protecting children, the Qatar Foundation for the Protection of Women and Children has published a manual on the detection of abuse (violence and neglect) involving children and women. The manual focuses on the detection of abuse, on the reporting and complaints mechanism and on tackling abuse, in addition to rehabilitation and reintegration.¹²

Promoting disability rights

71. Qatar continues to promote and protect the rights of persons with disabilities and has taken the following measures:

In addition, it raises awareness and educates the community about the rights of these groups and organizes training programmes for people who work with them, in addition to seminars, conferences and workshops to discuss issues relating to them, in cooperation with the relevant governmental and non-governmental institutions. Since the submission of the initial report, the programmes and projects implemented by the Department in connection with persons with disabilities include:

Promoting the right to education

74. Qatar has continued its efforts to ensure that all groups in society have access to education by taking a number of actions and measures. As a complement to efforts made in the field of the legislative environment, it enacted Act No. 25 of 2009, amending some provisions of the Sentences and Penalties Act in the Compulsory Education Act (Act No. 25 of 2001). Article 11, as amended, provides that those who violate the Act shall be liable to a fine ranging from a minimum of QR 5,000 to a maximum of QR 10,000. In addition, Ministerial decision No. 15 of 2010 establishing a committee to examine violations by parents under the Compulsory Education Act was issued. Article 8 includes the tasks and functions assigned to the committee, which consist of enumerating cases, studying the reasons why some parents prevent their children from attending school, taking appropriate action, identifying the role of the authorities represented in the decision and developing proposals and procedural steps for the application of the law.

75. Qatar also issued Ministerial decision No. 32 of 2013 on a conduct policy followed by Ministerial decision No. 33 of 2013 on student counselling, article 3 of which outlines the role and function of student counsellors. Counsellors are responsible for supervising students in schools in the light of the applicable conduct policy, for educating and orienting students, their parents and the school system in general of the rules of conduct, for making case studies of student conduct and developing solutions, in addition to cooperating and communicating with the relevant authorities.

76. The Supreme Education Council has continued its efforts to develop childcare and welfare through early education as a fundamental part of the education process, with kindergarten as a step on the educational ladder. It has taken various steps including opening more public kindergartens; there are currently 49 public kindergartens, fully furnished and equipped with learning resources, educational games and indoor and outdoor play areas. The Council also encourages the private sector to invest in this stage of education by offering the possibility of opening private kindergartens, the quality of which is ensured in accordance with a set of standards and requirements relating to buildings and education plans.

77. Moreover, the Council has adopted a number of different measures to increase primary enrolment rates, although Qatar does not have a problem with gross and net enrolment rates in view of the fact that in 2011, the overall primary enrolment rate was 99.3 per cent. The measures adopted include the establishment of a committee to monitor the implementation of the Compulsory Education Act and the opening of more public and private schools. In addition, the national Education and Training Sector Strategy 2011–2016 includes several programmes in this regard.¹⁸

78. With regard to the prohibition of all forms of corporal punishment against children, a series of measures has been adopted with a view to preventing corporal punishment and violence in schools and preserving children's dignity. These include the publication of a policy on conduct for schools. The policy consists of five articles outlining the objectives of the policy, the roles, responsibilities and duties of the various stakeholders (school, teacher, social worker, psychologist, conduct committee, student counselling office, students), and an analysis of student conduct, violations, preventive and disciplinary measures and truancy. It focuses on the reinforcement of positive behaviour and on preventive measures, emphasizing the importance of self-discipline for students.

It promotes educational values and absolute confidentiality in dealing with all cases, taking into account justice and equal treatment among students and avoids the use of non-pedagogical methods, including all forms of physical and psychological abuse, to address misconduct.

79. In addition, social workers conduct awareness and education programmes that contribute to raising awareness with regard to the prohibition of corporal punishment and mechanisms for dealing with cases of violence. A series of training courses was organized, targeting principals, teachers and administrators in order to familiarize them with the characteristics and psychological needs of different age groups at every stage of education. Moreover, social workers participate on an annual basis in training programmes organized by human rights institutions in Qatar, such as the Qatar Foundation for the Protection of Women and Children, which deal with cases of violence among students and means of tackling them.

80. Tireless efforts and practical steps continue in order to disseminate a culture of human rights in educational institutions, including through the media. In addition to the

- Establishment of a hotline to respond to migrant workers’ complaints;
- Establishment of a special office of the Ministry in the court for the purpose of monitoring the dates of hearings in coordination with the Department of Labour Relations and providing simultaneous interpretation.

82. In addition to the aforementioned measures and procedures to protect workers' rights, Qatar has adopted a number of procedures with a view to protecting female domestic workers in particular, including:

- Establishment of a working group from the Ministry of Labour and Foreign Affairs and the Ministry of the Interior responsible for the ongoing coordination of foreign and domestic workers' affairs and exploration of how best to protect their rights;
- Verification of domestic workers' employment contracts by the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs in order to guarantee the rights set forth therein. The Ministry monitors the activities of employment offices importing domestic labour from abroad and conducts periodic unannounced visits in order to verify that they are not being exploited and that their rights are safeguarded. These visits have resulted in the closure of a number of offices for violations.

Reform of the sponsorship system

83. Act No. 4 of 2009 on the entry, exit, residence and sponsorship of migrants authorizes the transfer of sponsorship in a number of cases, including abuse, which further protects the rights of migrant workers. Under article 22, the competent authority in the Ministry of the Interior may transfer a worker's sponsorship to another employer by written agreement between the new employer and the former employer – subject, in the case of workers to whom the Labour Code applies, to the approval of the competent authority in the Ministry of Labour. Under article 12, sponsorship of a migrant worker may be transferred without the sponsor's consent in certain cases, in order to protect the worker's rights. The Minister of the Interior or his representative may transfer the sponsorship of migrant workers to whom the Labour Code does not apply to another employer in cases where abuse by the sponsor has been established or where doing so is in the public interest. Sponsorship of a worker to whom the Labour Code applies may be transferred to another employer at the worker's request for the same reasons, with the approval of the Minister of the Interior or his representative and with the approval of the Ministry of Labour. Article 52 of the Code prescribes a fine of QR 10,000 for violation of the provisions of article 9, which requires employers not to withhold the passports of workers and to hand over their documents once residency procedures are completed, so enhancing the legal protection of migrant workers.

84. Through the Qatar Foundation to Combat Human Trafficking, Qatar has endeavoured to implement and invigorate the recommended guidelines on human rights and trafficking in persons, in the framework of the National Strategy to Combat Trafficking in Persons and the National Plan 2010–2015. IV. Future challenges and perspectives

88. While Qatar has witnessed numerous developments with regard to the promotion and protection of human rights in terms of legislation, institutions and awareness, it is going through a distinctive phase in its history and pressing rapidly towards complete and comprehensive development. As a result, Qatar has recorded unprecedented rates of growth and economic recovery. Qatar was given a prestigious first rank among the countries of North Africa and the Middle East and was ranked 18th on the global scale by the World Economic Forum in the Human Capital Report 2013. It should be noted that 122 countries were covered by the 2013 report, which centred on four main pillars including health, education, employment and enabling environment.

89. The attention paid to human rights extends beyond the field of legislation to include building institutions, strategies, policies and programmes that seek to translate the human rights protections afforded by the law into reality. Consequently, numerous institutions have been established to promote and protect human rights as a comprehensive and indivisible concept.

90. That point was emphasized in the overall vision for development (Qatar National Vision 2030), which incorporates important themes affecting human rights in the areas of education, health, environment, migrant workers' rights, women's empowerment and the rights of the child. It was also emphasized in the National Development Strategy 2011–2016, which aims to transform the objectives of the Qatar National Vision 2030 into reality and outlines in practical terms progress on the economic, social, cultural, humanitarian and environmental fronts in the coming years.

91. Although there have been palpable developments in Qatar in terms of legislation, institutions and awareness, and although the political will exists and the material resources are available, some temporary obstacles remain. These include the large and unprecedented population increase of over 100 per cent in recent years in Qatar, in addition to the fact that legislative and institutional developments are recent and that Qatar has only recently dealt with international human rights mechanisms.
