Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 of 18 June 2007, held its seventeenth session from 21 October to 1 November 2013. The review of Malaysia was held at the 8th meeting on 24 October 2013. The delegation of Malaysia was headed by Dato' Ho May Yong, Deputy Secretary-General, Multilateral Affairs in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. At its 17th meeting held on 31 October 2013, the Working Group adopted the report on Malaysia.
2. On 14 January 2013, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Malaysia: Japan, Kenya and Switzerland.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Malaysia:
 - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/17/MYS/1);
 - (b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/17/MYS/2);
 - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/17/MYS/3 and Corr.1).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Belgium, the Czech Republic, Germany, the Netherlands, Norway, Slovenia, Sweden, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America was transmitted to Malaysia through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the universal periodic review (UPR).

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation commenced the review by reaffirming the value of the UPR process to Malaysia and its appreciation for the opportunity to engage in discussion and dialogue on developments in the human rights situation of the country and on its achievements, challenges and best practices in promoting and protecting human rights. In approaching the review, the Government had engaged in and would continue inclusive and transparent consultations, including with civil society.
6. As a developing country, Malaysia was committed to pursuing a national development agenda. In that regard, one key policy initiative aimed at achieving developed high-income status was the Government Transformation Programme. The Programme and related initiatives contained measures that supported the Government's ongoing efforts to promote and protect human rights in such areas as: the right to security and safety; the right to adequate housing; the right to education; and the right to health. The delegation gave details of new steps taken to weed out corruption and corrupt practices at all levels and with all partners, particularly within the Government.
7. The delegation noted increased public participation and vibrant discourse with respect to the political situation in Malaysia. In that context, the delegation discussed the general elections of Malaysia (GE-13), including measures taken to improve the conduct, transparency and inclusiveness of the electoral process and noted that certain issues and concerns related to the conduct and outcome of the elections were being addressed. The Government also emphasized the need to work towards rebuilding national unity and achieving national reconciliation post elections.

8. On cooperation with United Nations human rights mechanisms, the Government stated that it was preparing to receive the Special Rapporteur on the right to food in December 2013 and that it would extend an invitation to the Special Rapporteur on the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health. The delegation clarified developments related to the ratification by Malaysia of additional international human rights instruments.

9. The Government stated that matters involving lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender persons and adherents of other schools of Islamic thought would be handled carefully and consistent with cultural traditions, religious doctrine and societal norms, and domestic laws and regulations.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

10. During the interactive dialogue, 104 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in chapter II of the present report.

11. Saudi Arabia noted progress in human rights through the provision of education, health care and housing, poverty reduction and legislative reform, including repeal of the Internal Security Act.

12. Senegal commended amendments to legislation on trafficking and domestic violence, and progress on women's access to positions of responsibility in the public sector, health, and education.

13. Sierra Leone highlighted efforts to bring domestic legislation into line with core international human rights standards, free education, socioeconomic transformation initiatives and the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC), the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD) and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW).

14. Singapore commended progress in health care, housing, food, employment, gender equality and women's status, including Malaysia hosting the Woman Deliver Conference 2013.

15. Slovakia was concerned about excessive interference by the police and Armed Forces in freedom of expression. It invited Malaysia to take steps to guarantee the right to a fair trial.

16. Slovenia commended Malaysia for ratifying CRPD, the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict (OP-CRC-AC) and the Optional Protocol to CRC on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography (OP-CRC-SC) and for removing reservations to CEDAW. It welcomed new legislation on children's rights.

17. South Africa noted the "IMalaysia" concept and encouraged Malaysia to continue efforts to overcome the challenges hindering the promotion and protection of human rights.

18. Spain was concerned by the Malaysian stance on the death penalty, given that executions continued despite Malaysia accepting to reduce the number of offences incurring capital punishment.

19. The State of Palestine commended Malaysia on its repeals of outdated civil rights legislation, the ratification of international instruments and increased education budget. It requested statistics on children not enrolled in school.
20. The Sudan welcomed Malaysian cooperation with OHCHR on solving the problems experienced by non-nationals in Malaysia.
21. Sweden noted the declining rate of executions, but noted their continuation despite the announcement of a review of the mandatory death penalty and a temporary moratorium.
22. Switzerland called for a moratorium on the death penalty. It was concerned about restrictions on assembly, and shortcomings in ensuring the land rights of indigenous peoples.
23. Brunei Darussalam commended the measures taken to promote and protect the rights of women and children. It noted Malaysian commitment to enhancing the lives of the people through provision of quality education.
24. Timor-Leste commended efforts to combat corruption and the commitment to guarantee the right to education, including providing free primary and secondary education.
25. Tunisia welcomed the country's withdrawal of its reservations to CEDAW and CRC and the adoption of an action plan to promote women's rights.
26. Turkey welcomed the strengthening of economic, social and cultural rights and its achievements in increasing women's participation in all facets of life.
27. Turkmenistan commended Malaysia on strengthening its legislative, institutional and policy mechanisms on human rights and bringing its domestic legislation into line with international treaties.
28. Ukraine asked what specific preventive measures were included in national policies on the promotion of women's rights and when Malaysia would accede to core human rights instruments.
29. The United Arab Emirates commended the progress in combating and legislating against trafficking in persons and transborder crime.
30. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland requested information on implementation of the new provisions on preventive detention. It urged further reform to ensure freedom of expression.
31. The United Republic of Tanzania noted that Malaysia still faced human rights challenges. It appreciated the commitment to raising living standards and the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs).
32. The United States of America encouraged the revision or repealing of two laws in order for Malaysia to enhance the freedoms of expression and assembly. It remained concerned that trafficking victims continued to be detained in government facilities.
33. Uruguay noted the recent ratification of international human rights instruments and the withdrawal of reservations to CEDAW.
34. Uzbekistan welcomed the ratification of the two Optional Protocols to CRC and planned accession to ICESCR.
35. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela commended the Government Transformation Programme, the provision of housing to the poor and poverty reduction.
36. Thailand welcomed the engagement of Malaysia with ASEAN human rights mechanisms and its accession to the Optional Protocols to CRC.

37. Yemen commended the adoption of the National Family Plan of Action and noted that Malaysia was setting up a national human rights action plan and a human rights framework.
38. Zimbabwe praised the abolition of fees for primary and secondary education, improvements to health care and civil and political rights legislation.
39. Afghanistan commended the implementation by Malaysia of previous recommendations and its ongoing cooperation with international organizations regarding refugees.
40. Albania welcomed the withdrawal of reservations to CEDAW and CRC. It urged Malaysia to continue to establish free and compulsory education.
41. Algeria praised the ratification of CRPD and the two Optional Protocols to CRC.
42. Argentina encouraged Malaysia to continue collaboration with organizations addressing refugees and asylum seekers and work towards abolition of the death penalty.
43. Australia was concerned by the proposed reintroduction of long-term detention without judicial review and encouraged Malaysia to complete ratification of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court.
44. Austria was concerned at restrictions relating to religion in Malaysia. It noted that additional measures were necessary to improve press freedom.
45. Azerbaijan welcomed the strengthening of the National Human Rights Commission, the abolition of fees for education and the reduction in poverty.
46. Bahrain commended the establishment of a national health system and efforts to protect women and guarantee their rights.
47. Bangladesh commended policies regarding women's advancement and the arrangement with Bangladesh promoting the rights of Bangladeshi workers.
48. Belarus noted progress made in combating corruption, particularly through the implementation of relevant conventions. It commended efforts to combat human trafficking.
49. Belgium was concerned by the ill-treatment of human rights defenders, including those defending lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) rights, and by the death penalty.
50. Benin commended the National Human Rights Commission and National Plan of Action for the Advancement of Women.
51. Bhutan noted measures protecting the rights of the most vulnerable groups and commended the accession to the two Optional Protocols to CRC.
52. The Plurinational State of Bolivia commended compliance with previous recommendations, demonstrating commitment to human rights. It applauded eradication of extreme poverty.
53. Botswana noted efforts towards accession to international treaties and the fight against corruption, and welcomed improved access to education. It expressed concerns about reports of ill-treatment.
54. Brazil commended the accession to OP-CRC-AC and OP-CRC-SC, and poverty reduction. Noting development of the national human rights action plan, it still had concerns regarding freedom of expression.

55. Viet Nam noted the good example of tolerance set, and welcomed improved rights for vulnerable groups. It commended progress in increased access to education.
56. Bulgaria noted progress in good governance, institution-strengthening and general elections, and the development of all categories of human rights. It encouraged Malaysia to introduce a moratorium on the implementation of death sentences.
57. Burundi commended efforts to provide universal access to housing; and fight corruption to build sustainable economic development. It welcomed the withdrawal of some reservations to CEDAW.
58. Cambodia welcomed steps to implement national plans, strengthen judicial integrity and combat human trafficking; and commended eradication of extreme poverty.
59. Canada asked how legal and human rights of detainees would be ensured. It encouraged removing restrictions on freedom of expression, assembly and religion, and ending faith-based governmental discrimination.
60. Chad acknowledged the priority given to housing, education, poverty eradication and improving living conditions, and the implementation of previous recommendations, even those not accepted.
61. Chile commended the development of action plans, institution-strengthening and legislative reforms, which demonstrated commitment to civil and political rights.
62. China noted poverty reduction, legislation and national plans for rights of women and people with disabilities, and judicial reform.
63. Colombia applauded transparency and collaboration with human rights mechanisms, particularly the development of a national human rights action plan. Colombia would share its experience.
64. In responding to the comments and questions, the Government reaffirmed its commitment to pursuing a legal transformation agenda, including through removal of legislative and other possible impediments to the enjoyment of the full range of human rights. The Government had initiated an extensive review of existing laws and regulations, particularly on civil and political rights, beginning in 2009, which saw, inter alia, the repealing of the Internal Security Act 1960 and the promulgation of the Peaceful Assembly Act 2012 (PAA), which enhanced the implementation of the constitutional right to assemble peaceably and without arms.
65. Malaysia illustrated the implementation of PAA with reference to two major rallies where the police had adhered fully to the spirit of PAA by facilitating the rallies with effective crowd control to prevent untoward incidents.
66. The delegation further discussed the constitutionally guaranteed freedom of religion in Malaysia which is subject to the constitutional restrictions pertaining to the propagation of other religions or beliefs on Muslims and the preservation of public order and national security. Malaysia explained the recent Court of Appeal decision dated 14 October 2013 on the case concerning the Herald – the Catholic weekly: the Court decided clearly that the Minister’s decision to ban the use of the word “ALLAH” in the Malay version of the Herald is constitutional and legal. The Court ruled that the Minister’s decision was based on legitimate grounds of public safety and public order as such action raised religious sensitivities in Malaysia. The Minister’s decision as a preventive measure to ensure public safety and public order in Malaysia is legal and also in compliance with the laws to control and restrict the propagation of religious doctrine or belief among Muslims.
67. Malaysia also explained its initiatives concerning in-depth research on the death penalty. It further clarified that the proposed National Harmony Bill was being deliberated in consultation with civil society organizations and international experts. In that regard, the Sedition Act, laws of various jurisdictions and the complex and unique position of Malaysia, including on the position of the King and Malay Rulers, and threats to national security and public order were also taken into consideration.

68. Malaysia emphasized that the revitalised Prevention of Crime Act 1959 (POCA) sought to deal with organized crime and serious crimes. Its commitment to uphold human rights norms and standards was reflected by the inclusion of safeguards in POCA, including: (a) the requirement for a minister to submit an annual report to Parliament on all activities related to detention orders; (b) the requirement for Parliament to revisit the provision on detention orders every five years; (c) the possibility of challenging decisions by the Crime Prevention Board in the High Court; and (d) judicial review of detention concerning any issue of non-compliance with any procedural requirement by the Crime Prevention Board.

69. Malaysia reiterated its commitment not to reintroduce broad powers of preventive detention and refuted the allegation that the POCA amendments marked the return of the repealed Internal Security Act 1960.

70. The delegation elaborated on measures taken to better protect migrant workers, including a special registration exercise that would run for three months from 21 October 2013 with a view to addressing grievances by migrant workers or employers cheated by irresponsible recruitment agencies.

71. Malaysia continued to view trafficking in persons seriously and had sought to improve protection for victims, including through closer collaboration with NGOs. The Government had announced the launch of the first NGO-led shelter, to be operational in mid-November 2013, funded by the Government.

72. Malaysia remained committed to addressing the issue of custodial deaths, including through awareness-raising programmes on human rights for police personnel. The establishment of the Enforcement Agency Integrity Commission reflected the readiness of the Government to address violations of work ethics and misconduct by law enforcement agencies, including the police.

73. Malaysia emphasized that Islam and Islamic administration of justice under the Syariah had a long history in Malaysia. The status of Islam as the religion of the Federation and the freedom to practice religions other than Islam was also enshrined in the Constitution.

74. In Malaysia, matters pertaining to Islam, including codification of Syariah laws and procedures and its administration, fell under the jurisdiction of the respective States.

75. The National Fatwa Consultative Council had issued a decision in 1984, updated in 1996, determining the Sunni school of thought to be adhered to by Malaysian Muslims. That decision was endorsed by State Fatwa Councils and later gazetted.

76. The allegation that Islamic Family Law in Malaysia discriminated against Muslim women on marriage issues was unfounded. However, the Government acknowledged that there was room for improvement in the implementation of the law by the Syariah courts.

77. The delegation explained that Malaysia had recently implemented a national minimum wage policy which would benefit all workers in all sectors and regions. Additionally, Malaysia continued to guarantee equal access to social justice for foreign workers.

78. Malaysia remains committed to enhance worker protection including through: (a) enhancing maternity protection; (b) mandatory requirement for payment of wages into bank accounts; (c) increasing minimum retirement age to 60 years; and (d) implementation of bilateral arrangements with labour source countries.

79. Costa Rica encouraged consideration of a death penalty moratorium with a view to abolition.

80. Croatia welcomed improved protection from domestic violence, ratification of CRPD and withdrawal of some reservations to CEDAW. The non-discrimination principle should be universally applied.

81. Cuba, noting the commitment to human rights, commended progress in education, health, combating poverty and improving quality of life.

82. Cyprus commended adoption of human rights laws, and encouraged Malaysia to pursue national policies to consolidate the human rights infrastructure.

83. The Czech Republic noted the continued use of the Printing Presses and Publication Act, the Official Secrets Act and the Sedition Act to restrict freedom of expression and the media.

84. The Democratic People's Republic of Korea recognized universal enjoyment of rights, equality and harmony, economic growth, social development and increased health and education investment.

85. Denmark expressed concern about the lack of free, prior and informed consent to appropriation of indigenous land; and limits to freedom of expression and opinion.

86. Djibouti appreciated the national human rights institution's attainment of "A" status. Djibouti noted ratification of CRPD and efforts to implement CEDAW principles.

87. Ecuador applauded contributions to the rights of women, children and migrant workers, and to combating human trafficking and transnational organized crime.

88. Egypt, noting obstacles to the protection of persons with disabilities and combating human trafficking, asked how Malaysia intended to address those two issues.

89. Finland welcomed ratification of CRPD and the withdrawal of some of its reservations to the human rights treaties to which it was a party. It requested information on steps taken to ratify the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (ICESCR), the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CAT), and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (CERD).

90. Ethiopia acknowledged advances in several human rights areas, and progress in increasing women's empowerment and participation in the labour force and in key decision-making positions.

91. France welcomed ratification of CRPD and the withdrawal of reservations to CEDAW. It enquired about the timetable for repealing the Sedition Act.

92. Germany appreciated the action on recommendations addressed to Malaysia during the first UPR cycle, including legislative changes in the field of domestic violence.

93. Guatemala welcomed the "IMalaysia" programme, the eradication of extreme poverty and the provisions in place to grant citizenship to children born abroad to Malaysian women married to foreigners.

94. Hungary expressed concern about the restrictive nature of the Printing Presses and Publications Act. It requested a preliminary assessment of the impact of the Whistleblower Protection Act.

95. India welcomed the National Education Blueprint and steps taken to protect the human rights of migrant workers. It commended the foreign workers registration programme.
96. Indonesia commended the repeal of much criticized Internal Security Act and took note of various positive measures on efforts to protect the rights and enhance the safety and welfare of foreign workers in Malaysia.
97. The Islamic Republic of Iran recognized initiatives to eradicate poverty and efforts to strengthen living standards and combat child trafficking.
98. Ireland expressed concern that the Government had used the Printing Presses and Publication Act to block publications considered hostile, continued to impose three years' imprisonment for "maliciously published false news" and obliged accused individuals to disprove guilt.
99. Italy encouraged increased efforts to address discrimination and violence against women and expressed concern about restrictions on freedom of religion or belief.
100. Jamaica noted achievements such as the abolition of school fees and the attainment of the MDG target on poverty reduction. It encouraged ratification of remaining core international human rights instruments.
101. Japan welcomed several measures, expressed concern over restrictions on freedoms of opinion and expression, and of association and peaceful assembly, and encouraged Malaysia to continue its efforts to further ensure those rights.
102. Kazakhstan welcomed the trend towards a moratorium on the death penalty. It called on Malaysia to consider a comprehensive reform of administration of criminal justice, including the death penalty.
103. Kuwait thanked Malaysia for legislation and setting up of five independent committees to fight corruption.
104. Kyrgyzstan noted efforts to ensure quality, accessible education and welcomed the abolition of school fees to increase access to education.
105. The Lao People's Democratic Republic welcomed the achievement of the MDGs target on poverty reduction ahead of schedule. It encouraged Malaysia to strengthen its cooperation with the United Nations.
106. Latvia appreciated the withdrawal of reservations to CEDAW and CRC. It acknowledged the role of special procedures in promoting and protecting human rights.
107. Lebanon welcomed the commitment to the UPR mechanism and noted measures to implement the recommendations that the Government had accepted from the first cycle.
108. Libya welcomed the importance attached to ensuring access to education for all and noted the achievement of the MDGs and ratification of international human rights instruments.
109. Liechtenstein expressed concern about the lack of progress in prohibiting the corporal punishment of children, despite the Government's stated intention to amend legislation in that area.
110. Maldives strongly encouraged Malaysia to investigate claims of efforts to reclassify female genital mutilation as a medical procedure and draft legislation forbidding the practice.
111. Mauritania highlighted the ongoing cooperation of Malaysia with human rights mechanisms and welcomed the establishment of the universal health-care system.

112. Mauritius noted the repeal of the Internal Security Act, new laws to protect the right to peaceful assembly and combat corruption, and measures to eradicate poverty.
113. Mexico welcomed progress in children's rights, including accession to OP-CRC-SC and OP-CRC-AC.
114. Montenegro asked what plans were in place for Malaysia to become a party to core international human rights instruments and what measures had been adopted to prevent child marriages, and early and forced marriages.
115. Morocco welcomed efforts to ensure universal education and promote South-South cooperation in that domain. It also praised the programme of modernization of the Government and the economy.
116. Mozambique noted achievements in many human rights fields, early attainment of the MDG on reducing poverty and the adoption of legislation on human trafficking.
117. Myanmar commended efforts in poverty eradication, promoting women's role decision-making and legislative measures to enjoyment of civil and political rights further.
118. Nepal noted the remarkable progress in achieving the MDGs and commended the National Plan of Action for the Advancement of Women.
119. The Netherlands noted that Malaysia was not a party to some key human rights treaties. It expressed concern about the practice of caning and the situation of LGBT persons.
120. New Zealand welcomed the commitment to ensuring the rights of indigenous peoples. It noted gaps in the institutional framework, particularly with regard to the police, and challenges faced regarding irregular migration.
121. Nigeria noted that Malaysia was on track to establishing a structured responsive and inclusive national health system, with new programmes and improved health indicators.
122. Norway encouraged Malaysia to ensure the educational rights of children from marginalized and disadvantaged communities and set a specific timetable for ratification of more core human rights conventions.
123. Oman highlighted the attention accorded to eradicating poverty, providing adequate housing and ensuring access to education, especially for disadvantaged groups.
124. Pakistan commended strides made in domestic legislative reforms, health care, poverty reduction, housing, gender equality, women's empowerment and provision of free primary and secondary education.
125. The Philippines welcomed the Government's constructive engagement with the Human Rights Council. It acknowledged progress in achieving the MDGs.
126. Poland expressed concern about attempts to tighten control over the Internet, and to restrict bloggers and limit the number of publications of various religions.
127. Qatar valued efforts made by Malaysia to protect human rights. It commended the National Action Plan for the Advancement of Women.
128. The Russian Federation valued the Government's efforts to ensure basic human rights and freedoms. It recognized the encouragement to inter-confessional tolerance and inter-ethnic dialogue.
129. Sri Lanka welcomed the achievement of the MDG target on poverty reduction, the accession to OP-CRC-SC and OP-CRC-AC, the priority given to women's empowerment and the commitment to quality and affordable education.

130. The delegation responded to questions and comments raised in the preceding interactive dialogue by reiterating that Orang Asli rights to land, beliefs, culture and non-discrimination were clearly provided for by the Federal Constitution and the Aboriginal People's Act 1954.

131. The Government clarified that a task force comprising senior officials had been established to review and formulate the necessary strategy regarding the issue of indigenous peoples' land rights, pursuant to the national inquiry into the land rights of indigenous peoples in Malaysia undertaken by SUHAKAM.

132. The Government continued to hold consultations with State authorities, other relevant agencies and indigenous groups on land issues. Progress had also been made in the survey and gazetting exercise for Orang Asli land.

133. Currently, the Government along with UNDP and UNICEF was collaborating on a study and review of the socioeconomic status of Orang Asli in peninsular Malaysia for the formulation of an Orang Asli national development plan.

134. Sarawak State, with a large indigenous population comprising 27 ethnic groups, had for nearly two centuries had laws which recognized and protected indigenous rights to land. Official records confirm Sarawak has about 1.5 million hectares of native customary rights (NCR) land. A survey to demarcate boundaries and guarantee security of tenure of NCR land was ongoing under the Government Transformation Programme.

135. The current development agenda, involving the building of hydroelectric facilities, necessitated the use of NCR land. Where rights to NCR land were affected, the State Government and its utility company, Sarawak Energy Berhad: (a) adopted best international practices in engagement and consultation with indigenous peoples, which conformed with acceptable norms and standards, including principles embodied in the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples; and (b) provided affected indigenous communities with a comprehensive compensation package, which assured them an immediate and substantial improvement in living standards, better access to basic human rights to education and health care, and better economic opportunities, whilst preserving their cultural identities and traditions.

136. Implementation of the resettlement action plan and compensation package for those affected by the Murum Hydro-electric Project exemplified a process that recognized the rights and well-being of the indigenous people.

137. In recognizing the challenges facing indigenous communities in Malaysia, the Government maintained that those communities must be afforded choice and be free to decide whether they wished to join mainstream society or not.

138. Malaysia continued to recognize women as important human capital. As an affirmative action, the Tenth Malaysia Plan (2011–2015) gave prominence to increasing women's participation in the labour force and decision-making positions, provision of support in challenging circumstances and eliminating all forms of discrimination.

139. Steps taken to increase women's participation in the labour force included incentives for the establishment of childcare centres, extension of fully paid maternity leave, employers' double tax deduction to retrain and employ women after a career break and enactment of the (Part-Time Employees) Regulation 2010.

140. Owing to the success of the "Policy of At Least 30% Women in Decision Making Positions in the Public Sector", a similar policy for the corporate sector had been introduced in 2011. In addition, the Women Directors Programme had been implemented and the Women Directors Registry established.

141. In empowering women economically, Malaysia had implemented microcredit schemes to encourage uptake of micro-enterprise opportunities to low-income individuals in rural and urban areas.

142. The Child Act was currently being reviewed to enhance the well-being of children. In addition, juvenile restorative justice models were studied, while initiatives were taken to protect children from cyberthreats.

143. Malaysia highlighted that the Persons with Disabilities Act was a non-punitive law. However, non-compliance with the Act could be addressed through relevant legislation, namely the Penal Code, the Criminal Procedure Code and uniform building by-laws. Additionally, the existing Policy and Plans of Action for Persons with Disabilities was currently being reviewed in line with the regional aspiration towards the Asia and Pacific Decade for Persons with Disabilities, 2013–2022, and the Incheon Strategy to “Make the Right Real”.

144. A technical committee chaired by the Ministry of Women, Family and Community Development would be started to review all the existing reservations under CEDAW, CRC and CRPD, and optional protocols thereto that had not been ratified by Malaysia.

145. The review concluded with Malaysia reiterating its commitment to and belief in UPR and its follow-up. The delegation stressed that Malaysia had approached the exercise seriously and would give full consideration to all comments and recommendations made during the review.
